Army Enrollees Seek Craft Education

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The main reason young men enlist in the army is to learn a trade at Uncle Sam's expense and not because of the spirit of adventure, according ti Col. L. B. Magruder, recruiting officer for the second corps area.

Magruder said seven out of every 10 applicants ask whether they can learn a trade in the army "and the answer to that is always yes."

"The army is in need of every type of mechanic, carpenter, electrician, motor and engineman, clerk, typist, stenographer," Magruder said, "and the only way the army can acquire these master craftsmen is to train them for its own particular use."
