Purdue Never Has Scored on Ohio State

By FRANCIS J. POWERS
International News Service Sports Writer

CHICAGO —(INS)— Although geographic neighbors, Ohio State and Purdue have met at football fewer times than almost any Western Conference elevens. The ame at Columbus Saturday will be only the seventh and in the six previous contests, Purdue not only failed to score a victory but also a point.

Mal Elward and his swift Boilermakers hope to break into the scoring zone this time, even if unable to defeat the Buckeyes, who seem, at long last, to be traveling in high gear.

After scoring only 13 points in its first three games, Ohio State ran wild over Chicago and New York U. That was no great feat in itself but may be indicative that the Buckeyes have their offense working for the final charge toward the Western Conference championship or a share thereof.

Schmidt Is Blamed

Ohio State's early failures may be attributed to coaching faults. Francis Schmidt, always a drill sergeant, worked his squad so hard during the three weeks of pre-season practice it was stale for the opening game and only showed signs of recuperation against Chicago. Further, Schmidt depended too strongly on weight and power in the line, and his big tackles were effectively handled by Indiana, Southern California and Northwestern.

The Buckeyes should be prepared for their best football game of the season Saturday. They will need to be if Michigan is successfully handled in the final game of the season.

Purdue will be an excellent test for the permanency of Ohio's development. Faster backs than Lou Brock, Jack Brown and Mike Byelone are hard to find along the Big Ten front and any of the three can be a long range game breaker.

Ohio Has the Power

Brown had 50 yard runs against Detroit and Butler and colaborated with Brock to tie Fordham. It was Byelene who turned the tide against Wisconsin and his passing is almost as dangerous as his running.

Since the tie with Northwestern, Schmidt has been getting good results from Laughurst, Welbaum and Strausbaugh, backs from the sophomore ranks, and Capt. Mike Kabelo continues to be a steady runner and punter. Ohio state has more capable backs than Purdue and since the Boilermaker ball carriers average only 165 pounds the Buckeyes will have a considerable advantage.

Purdue was flat when held to a scoreless tie by Iowa and will need to come high if the traditional outcome of its duels with Ohio State is to be changed. The Buckeyes have entirely too much man power, and Purdue's best chance to at least crash the scoring column, is that Brown, Brock or Byelene may break out with a long run.

Zoric Cleaners Roll 2,813, Set New League Mark

The Zoric Dry Cleaners gave the best team performance Tuesday night when they smashed through with a new Commercial bowling league record of 2,813 pins on games of 896, 964 and 953.
