Petroleum Men Protest Diversion of Gas Tax Money

GREEN BAY—(U.P.)—A regional meeting of the Wisconsin Petroleum assn. was on record today opposing diversion of state gasoline tax moneys from highway construction and maintenance.

Charging that the amount diverted to other purposes totaled approximately $6,000,000, the oil men contended halting the practice would make it possible to reduce taxes from 4 to 3 cents.

State Treasurer John Smith told the group the state law indirectly forcing oil jobbers to pay the expense of collecting the tax was "unfair."

"But," he added, "there's going to be more or less new legislature in 1941, and we'll see what we can do then."

Q. How should chromium plated fixtures be kept clean?

A. This is one of the easiest metals to keep clean and stainless, requiring only frequent wiping with a damp cloth or washing with soap and water. The plating is very thin, and an abarsive will wear it away. Some metal polishes may damage it, and none should be used.

Louis, Comiskey Face Bob-and-Weave Tests

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Treating king and "comer" alike, the fistic fates have arranged coincident tests this month for Champion Joe Louis and young Pat Comiskey, hardest hitters in the heavyweight division.

Both seek to recapture ring glory from veteran bob-and-weavers who sapped their prestige two fights ago.

Should Joe and Pat come through these important tests successfully, no straining of the imagination is required to picture them shuffling out of opposite corners for a million-dollar gate next June.

Comiskey — paralyzing puncher from Paterson, N. J. —answers the gong first. He tangles again Thursday night at Madison Square Garden with that ancient but smart swing-low larruper, Steve Dudas, who rose from the floor to take an eight-round decision over Pat on Dec. 15.

That was a bitter defeat for Comiskey. When he entered the ring that night, the blond Irishman was the world's most widely publicized "white hope". Unbeaten in 24 professional fights, he had knocked out 22 opponents. He was the answer to a manager's prayer —a young Irish fighter who could punch and who could take it. He was pugilism's "million-dollar baby".

But Pat, still a bit crude in ringing Dudas a dangerously elusive target. Comiskey finally landed his piano punches, but on forehead and elbows. Dudas hit the deck for the count of eight in the fourth round, and Comiskey's manager Bill Daly, hit the ceiling. Pat had broken his left hand and bruised painfully his right. Despite his injured mitts, he gamely tried to carry the fight to Dudas, but lost the decision.

Meanwhile Champion Louis had a somewhat similar experience. Jolting Joe encountered Arturo Godoy of Chile at the Garden on Feb. 9. Veteran Godoy provided the ultimate in bobbing and weaving performances. He bent so low at times that his nose almost rubbed the resin. Louis and his handlers appreciated the danger in Godoy's low-swinging noggin and barricade of elbows. Louis wouldn't gamble like Comiskey did against Dudas. Louis was world champion and he wanted to fight a couple more times this year. So he took no chances on breaking his hands. He didn't cut loose. Acordingly, he made a poor showing against the Chilean and won a split decision. He was criticized roundly in the press for his lacklustre performance. His prestige and his pride suffered.

Now Louis again is training to meet Godoy at Yankee Stadium on June 20. This time the champion virtually will be forced to gamble with his hands or get licked. Godoy might have won the title in the first fight had he forced the battle in the closing rounds, instead of clowning. This time the Chilean will not clown. It is a big gamble for Bomber Joe. Trying for a quick knockout, he may injure his hands early in the fight. If he does, his crown will be gone with the wind.

Louis and Comiskey, once their unfortunate meetings with the bob-and-weavers, have fought once each and scored quick knockouts. The champ belted out Johnny Paycheck of Des Moines in the second round. Paycheck was so frozen with fright that a midget could have pushed him over. That was March 29.

Comiskey remained on the sidelines from Dec. 15 to May 14 when he knocked out Larry Marino of Baltimore in the first round at Jersey City. It required nearly five months for Pat's fractured left hand to heal. Now he claims both fists are as good as new. He has gone to a training camp for the first time—Madame Bey's at Summit, N. J.

Although Pat didn't fight during the five months of healing, he did a lot of limbering work in a Paterson gymnasium. And limbering was what he needed more than anything else. He had the bad habit of tensing his shoulders too tightly when in the ring. This made him awkward both in delivering his thunderbolts and in blocking an opponent's blows. The limbering exercises have improved his boxing considerably.

Pat's second meeting with Dudas Thursday night will be garnished with none of the fanfare associated with Louis' second title defense against Godoy. Pat and Dudas are being co-featured on the same Garden card with Buddy Baer and Valentin Campolo of Argentina. Fans are showing so little interest in Thursday's program that Comiskey's test may be staged in virtual privacy. But this does not detract from its extreme importance to the future of the heavyweight division. If Pat can belt out Dudas this time, you'll be listening to falling bodies as he smashes his way to the top. Because he's dynamite on the hoof. He's only 19 years old, but he hits harder than Louis.

Q. Please give a recipe for stuffed greens.

A. Prepare about two pounds of dandelion greens, beet tops, leeks, spinach, or other similar greens and cook them until tender. Drain, chop fine, add salt, pepper, and butter to taste. There should be about one quart of greens after they are chopped. Put one-half the greens on a greased baking pan and flatten them with a spoon to form a layer. Cover with a layer of stuffing about one inch in depth. Cover with the remainder of the greens, flattening the top layer to cover the stuffing. Place three or four thin slices of bacon across the top. Bake in a moderate oven (350-400 degrees F.) for 20 minutes. Serve on a hot platter surrounded with horseradish or cheese sauce. Stuffing —1 cup fine dry bread crumbs, ½ cup cold ground ham, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 1 teaspoon horseradish sauce, crushed or canned tomatoes to moisten. Mix thoroughly.
