HITLER LIKED WAR IN BOYHOOD DAYS

A small mustache may have had something to do with the history of the modern world. Adolf Hitler had the mustache, and it made many persons think of him as a clown, something like Charlie Chaplin in the movies.

That idea was in the minds of people who might have stopped him before it was too late. When they learned better, he had gathered power, and the world was heading toward widespread war.

Hitler's life is an amazing story, and I am going to take it up step by step, today and in days to come. You will see how anger and blazing words helped him to gain his power.

Hitler was born at Braunau, in northern Austria, on April 20, 1889. His 52-year-old father had met with little success in life, but not much.

The father had borne the name of Alois Schicklgruber until the age of 40. Then he had changed the family name to Hitler.

When the boy was old enough, he was sent to a grade school. One of his teachers later reported finding him "stubborn and quarrelsome." He would not give time to certain subjects, but he seems to have made progress in history. He declared that he "led the class" in this subject.

ADOLF HITLER

Many pupils do not like history textbooks which are "filled with wars and battles." This young Austrian was different from those pupils. He took a keen interest in war.

One day he found in his home a two-volume history of the Franco-Prussian war. He read it from start to finish, and it made him suppose there was "glory" to be found in war.

German was spoken in his household, and he was pleased by the smashing blows the German-speaking Prussians had dealt to France 30 years before. The reading of the two-volume history did much to form the pattern of his life. In later years, when the Germans lost a war after invading France, he grew bitter in the extreme.

The elder Hitler had held a place in customs-office work, and wanted his son to follow the same career. The son, however, had another idea. He wanted to become an artist.
