OLDEN THINKER KEPT WORKING WHEN CITY FELL

There will come a time, perhaps when this earth of ours will go under the rule of order and law, kindness and justice. Already we have people who are for the most part kind, people who want a peaceful world where no dictator can damage the rights of men.

Yet there is today no world police force, and so far in human history men have failed to build one up. It is a mistake to look back on man's record and suppose there has been just one war after another (many good things are to be found in history), but it is true that too many wars have taken place.

Archimedes and the Roman soldier

In the year we call 212 B. C., an an attack was made on the city of Syracuse by a Roman army. Syracuse was at that time a Greek colony, which had been started long before on the coast of the island of Sicily.

The Romans cut their way into the city, and put the people in fear, with the exception of one man. That man was Archimedes, perhaps the greatest scientist and thinker of his time.

The story of Archimedes jumping out of the bathtub and shouting "Eureka" may not be true, but it seems clear that he did discover an important law of nature related to water.

Archimedes also performed other work which helped the progress of science. Up to the end of his life he kept on trying to add to the world's store of knowledge. On the day the Roman's took Syracuse, we are told that he was busy working out a problem.

The old thinker, then about 75 years of age, seems to have been doing his work outdoors. A Roman soldier, with sword in hand, placed him under arrest.

"Come with me to the general," ordered the soldier.

"Not until I have worked out this problem," replied Archimedes.

Thereupon the soldier struck down and killed one of the great men of history. Two centuries later a Roman poet found his grave amidst a mass of bramble bushes near Syracuse.

Thirty-four years ago, a scholar studied a hand-written prayer book which was known to date back about 800 years. The study showed that the words had been written on parchment from which other words had been erased.

Using methods of modern science, the scholar was able to read most of the writing which, in a rough way, had been erased. He found that it was a book by Archimedes. No copy of that book had been known up to the time the scholar studied the prayer book in 1906.

MAYBE YOU NEED A FRESH DEAL IN COFFEE!

Vigorous Flavor THAT CAPTURES EVERY HEART!

Folger's has a distinct flavor advantage because it comes from the world's coffee growing Paradise—tropical mountains where sunshine, air, and rich volcanic soil produce a miracle in coffee flavor. Yet Folger's luxury need not cost you one cent extra. Letters from over 7,000 women say that they can use one-fourth less Folger's and still enjoy the best flavor. Make tomorrow morning an especially good morning by serving Folger's.
