Al's Five Breaks Quality Service Streak at 16 Wins

Quality Service Laundry's long victory run through municipal recreation league basketball opposition finally came to an end Tuesday night. Al's Five upset the hitherto unbeaten Laundrymen, 26-25, in a Major League session at East high, thus snapping the defending champion's season win streak at 16 straight, and 11 in the circuit.

A hook shot, in the last three seconds from close range, by Endres, won the game for Al's Five after the Quality quintet had gone ahead, 25-24.

In other games, the Western Wolves downed Haberman Auto Body, 32-26, to hold a share of first place with Al's Five in third round standings, while Madison Kipp outscored the Young Men's Club 38-31. Box scores:

Hawthorne Felt Downcast Before Successful Book Appeared

WITH a change of government, Nathaniel Hawthorne lost his post at the Custom House and moved to a different house in Salem. There he was under the need of making his writing help to pay family expenses. The Hawthornes had three children to provide for. One of the daughters was named Una, and the only son was Julian.

One day a publisher, James Fields, came to see him and found him "in a chamber above the sitting room, hovering near a stove."

The author seemed very downhearted.

"Now," said Fields, "is the time for you to publish a new book."

"Nonsense!" replied Hawthorne. "Who would risk publishing a book for me when Monroe and Co. have been so many years trying to sell a small edition of my last book?"

"I am ready to publish a new book of yours!" said the publisher. "What manuscript do you have ready?"

Hawthorne said that he had nothing which deserved to be printed. However, he at last handed over a roll of manuscript. Fields thanked him and hurried to catch his train to Boston. On the way there, he read the story which was to be printed under the title of "The Scarlet Letter."

When "The Scarlet Letter" was published, it proved a great success. Five thousand copies were sold in 10 days, a fine record for those days. The new book spread his fame far and wide. Readers in England, as well as in the United States, praised it as a work of art.

Hawthorne was 46 years old when "The Scarlet Letter" was published. This volume was followed within the next few years by "The House of Seven Gables," "The Blithedale Romance" and "Tanglewood Tales." These books also met a good reception, and did much to place
