Death Valley Days to Tell Madison Holdup Story Tonight Over WLS

You can bet the U. S. Navy aviation cadets will think she's nice when they appear with her Saturday on Columbia's "Matinee at Meadowbrook." Miss Drake is a Conover model—all-around sports girl and expert at skiing, swimming and hunting, hoped to be a designer.

A "thriller" which had its climax in Madison will be dramatized in Death Valley Days over WLS at 6:30 tonight.

The story's hero was H. McFarlane, a daring Wells Fargo express messenger. He was guarding the Minneapolis-Chicago run back in 1888 when he was warned to beware of a gang of desperadoes who might be after a valuable shipment on his train.

At Baldwin, Wis., a coffin was put aboard along with several crates of berries and fruit. The coffin was properly addressed to Chicago and the usual death certificate was attached. But as Mac helped load the box he felt a barely perceptible movement inside, as if the "body" had braced itself against the jolts.

The messenger had the coffin completely buried under crates of berries, then wired the sheriff to meet the train at Madison with several deputies. When the officer arrived he shouted to the "corpse" to resurrect itself and surrender its weapons before he opened fire at the count of 10.

At the count of nine the heavy coffin lid raised slowly. Out came a revolver, another, a rifle, a hatchet, a butcher knife, a coil of rope, and a bottle of chloroform. Then the bandit crawled out, looking much like a true corpse after his long ride.
