Sire Grand Slam Sold for $75,000

LEXINGTON, Ky. — (U.P.) — Grand Slam, an all-time turf champion and now a successful sire, was sold for $75,000 at a dispersal sale following the Lexington sales which ended Thursday night. Henry Knight, Almahurst Farm, Jessamine county, Ky., purchased the chestnut stallion, which was second on the list of sires of juvenile money winners last year. Eleven of Grand Slam's offsprings won $107,700. Total sales at the three-day wartime counterpart of the Saratoga sales amounted to $928,700, officials announced. Some 311 horses were sold.

Elephant Herds Wear "Rubbing Stones" Smooth

HERE and there in Africa are big stones which have been rubbed smooth, almost polished, by elephants. They are known as "rubbing stones."

The elephants rub the stones for the simple reason that their sides "itch." a herd of elephants seems to know where the best rubbing stone stands in a forest or jungle. Together the beasts go there and , one by one, scratch themselves.

It is believed that the members of an elephant herd are usually, if not always, related—being sisters, brothers, cousins, grandchildren and so on.

Elephant mothers often are called "cow elephants" or "cows." An idea of the care they take of their "calves" will be found in this report by an African elephant hunter.

"We sat down and watched the herd. The cows seemed to keep an eye on their children, never letting them go far away. If a calf went too far down hill, the mother would go after it and give it a smack with her trunk.

"The little fellows played about among the trees, and tried to pull down branches.

"The bulls had moved a little farther up the hill and were standing still when a light breeze sprang up. The breeze carried our scent to the cows, and they threw up their trunks and trumpeted. Then they rushed to gather up their calves, each seeking her own child.

"I took special notice of one elephant which had a hard time finding her calf. When at last she spied it, she gave it an almighty smack across the back and sent it flying up the hill."

The bulls in an elephant herd take little interest in the young. The cows, on the other hand, seem never to forget their calves when the herd is in danger.

African elephants are close to three feet high at the shoulders when they are born. They gain about a foot a year in the first three years of their life, but in later years their growth slows down.

The elephant known as Jumbo was seven feet tall at the age of four. When he was 10 years old, he stood eight feet and eight inches at the shoulders. At 18 he was 11 feet tall and still was not quite through growing.
