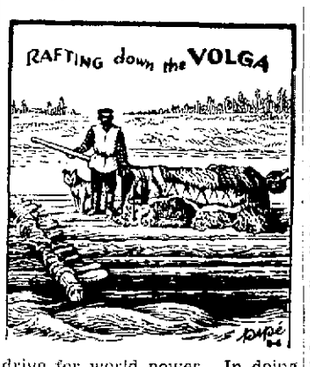
U. S. S. R. Could Hold Canada, Mexico, Alaska and United States

The big part of Russia in the second World war has led many persons to grow more interested in that country. Several of my friends have said to me, "If it had not been for Russia, the cause of the United Nations probably would have been lost!"

Surely Russia has proved of great help in halting Hitler's drive for world power. In doing that, the Russians have suffered deeply. More of them have given their lives in battle than the soldiers and sailors of all other countries which have fought Germany.



Russia is the largest of the worlds nations, so far as land is concerned. It is big enough to hold the United States and Canada, with plenty of space left over for Mexico and Alaska.

The official name of Russia is "Union of Soviet Socialist Republics," with the initials U. S. S. R. Most persons, however, call the country simply "Russia." Some speak of it as the "Soviet Union" or "Soviet Russia."

The word "soviet" means "council," and it became a part of Russia's name only 27 years ago. It gained importance because of the soviets, or councils, of soldiers and workers which were formed near the end of the first World war.

The climate differs greatly in various parts of Russia. Far to the north is land which is frozen all through the year, but in the south are places which are almost tropical. The Crimea, where the Big Three meetings were held last month, is a winter resort. Snow seldom falls in the lower sections of the Crimea.

Large rivers flow through Russia, and the most famous of them is the Volga. Rising in the Valdai Hills, northwest of Moscow, it flows westward, then south to the Caspian sea. The Volga is more than twice as long as the Ohio river.

The Volga has been frozen over this winter, as it is every year. During most of its course, the breakup of the ice will take place next month. The Russians use the frozen surface of the Volga as a winter highway for sledges. The river has a slow current, and the freezing provides a strong, solid crust.

LUCK WASN'T ALL BAD

NEWTON, Mass. —(U.P.)— As luck would have it, Dominic Bianchi went to work one morning leaving $3,500 in cash and $1,000 worth of war bonds in a glass jar in the cellar. He returned to find fire had damaged his home to the tune of $3,000, but firemen rescued the glass jar with his money and bonds.
