Reds Expected to Drop Browder

Due to Resume Class War in U. S.

WASHINGTON— (U.P.) —American Communists are about to boot Earl Browder out of the party command in a maneuver toward resuming the class war they abandoned nearly two years ago under his leadership.

BROWDER

Browder persuaded the party to give up its active political status and to become the Communist Political assn. It was his theory that all elements of the population of the United States could live, work, and prosper together. Other Communists challenged Browder.

Now after more than a month of public discussion in the Communist press, these developments appear likely:

ONE. Removal of Browder and selection of an advocate of the class struggle as American Communist leader. William Z. Foster, a veteran of the movement, seems to be a likely successor.

TWO. Abandonment of the "political association" type of organization in favor of a regularly organized political party.

THREE. An aggressive Communist boring into all mass organizations—notable labor unions.

John A. Reuling, the board of trustees announced.

The new president had served as director of personnel and dean of men at Winona for 10 years. Dr. Reuling, who resigned Apr. 30 after three years as president, expects to leave for Boston to assume the African secretaryship of the American board of foreign missions.

MacDonald to Head Northland College

ASHLAND —(U.P.)— Dr. Manley MacDonald, Winona, Minn., State Teachers college, was named president of Northland college Tuesday to succeed Dr.

Uncle Ray's Corner

GODDESS OF RAINBOW GAVE HER NAME TO IRIS FLOWER

The poet Homer told about Iris, goddess of the rainbow. This fair deity was pictured as a young woman, and often she was supposed to carry messages for the goddess Hera.

As you may remember, Hera was the wife of Zeus, and the "queen of heaven." She was much the same as the goddess Juno among the Romans.

When Iris went to the earth in the service of Hera, there was a fancy that she used the rainbow as a pathway. In time the Greeks spoke of the rainbow, itself, as Iris.

Certain flowers came to be known as "irises" or "rainbow flowers," and these are raised today in many gardens. They differ widely in color, and this fact suggested their name. Some irises are yellow, others are red, blue or lavender.

In Great Britain there grows a golden yellow iris known as the water flag or yellow flag. This kind of iris needs a great deal of water if it is to grow well. Often it is found on river banks or in marshes.

An Iris In Bloom

Certain iris plants have roots which are useful in making perfumes. The so-called "orris roots" are cut into pieces about four inches long, and are sold on the market in Florence and other centers in northern Italy. Often they go into sachet bags. The roots give off a pleasing odor which has been compared to that of violets.

About 20 kinds of iris are native to North America. These include the blue flags which grow in wet places from Nova Scotia to British Columbia in Canada. In the United States blue flags grow wild in most states.

Iris plants are slender, and many of them have grasslike leaves. They differ a great deal in height. Dwarf flags grow only about five inches above the ground. Other kinds of iris are from three to five feet tall. Some iris plants have root bulbs and others have not. Several kinds of iris have the common name of "flags." Yet plant experts say that flags are true members of the iris family.
