Offers Advice To Folks Who Stand All Day

Lots of folks have jobs that require them to stand on their feet all day. This can be very tiring if a person is not used to it or if they don't feel as good as they should. Tommy C. Stinson, Augusta, Ga., is a bartender, and there was a time when he didn't feel that he could stand up all day on his job. Mr. Stinson read how many folks had been helped by HADACOL and bought a bottle. After taking HADACOL, he says his energy returned and he feels good. He was suffering a deficiency of Vitamins B-1, B-2, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains. Here is what Mr. Stinson says about HADACOL:

Tommy Stinson

"Being a bartender demands that I stand on my feet all day, which naturally causes fatigue and nervousness. After reading of the wonderful results other people had after taking HADACOL, I decided to try it myself. My energy came back and my nervousness is gone. My appetite also increased."

He also announces that during Lent the evening devotions will be on "Men of the Passion," with subjects as follows: Feb. 4, "The Betrayer"; Feb. 11, "The Stone"; Feb. 18, "The Lover"; and Feb. 25, "The Counselor."

Working in co-operation with the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., and the Evangelical and Reformed Church, they are endeavoring to raise $130,000 to put up a building for the American School for Girls, in which 250 girls are enrolled.

U. S. Churches' Missions Comfort and Strengthen War Homeless in Korea

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK, Feb. 10. (AP) Christian missions built and supported by American churchgoers are proving their worth dramatically in war-torn Korea.

Dr. John Thompson Peters, representing the interdenominational National Council of Churches of Christ, recently surveyed Korean relief needs and returned heartened and inspired by the church work in progress among millions of homeless.

"The women among the missionary families were returned to Japan at the beginning of trouble," Dr. Peters said, "but most of the men stayed—except those who were too old or in poor health. We found these men leaders of large groups of nationals. They gathered their people together, moved them in groups south when necessary, distributed supplies and acted as liaison between the Koreans and the military establishment.

FAITH AND SPIRIT

"The people themselves are continuing to gather for worship—out of doors when necessary. We were distressed to see the destruction of property—missions, churches, schools and hospitals—but we were immeasurably impressed by the faith and spirit of these Christians in a time of peril and serious physical need."

Throughout the period of Red domination north of the 38th Parallel the Communists worked systematically to discourage and stamp out Christian religious activity.

"The Communists killed off the Christian leaders—most of them nationals," Dr. Peters said. "In Pyongyang, for instance, we know that 80 per cent of the pastors were killed—35 Presbyterian pastors, 12 Methodist pastors and six Roman Catholics."

Various methods were used in the drive to eliminate Christianity. School children, for instance, were kept in their day schools all Christmas Eve and night to prevent their attending religious exercises. A pledge of allegiance to the Communist government was required. Those who refused to sign were "liquidated," Dr. Peters said.

"In Pyongyang, where a theological seminary flourished, the Communists put Red teachers on the staff with the regular teachers," he continued.

"There were 600 students at the seminary last May. When they sought to have them sign the oath of allegiance, 480 of the students walked into the hills and became guerrilla fighters. The Christianity of these people is a strong, living force."

In Red China, the situation is somewhat different. Missionaries there were allowed to continue their work until last September. At that time there were more than 1000 Christian missionaries in the country. Some of these missionaries were pulled out of the country, returned to Japan or sent home for reassignment to other countries.
