What Goes Up, Comes Down; Even Monkeys

MILWAUKEE —(AP)— A small brown monkey proved to its own satisfaction Monday that security can be more attractive from some viewpoints than freedom.

After 24 hours in the top of a tree, the gruelling test of life in the rough—encompassing insects, curious birds, and finally a swarm of merry-making crows—accomplished what blandishments would not.

The monkey came down from the tree, scrambling through a house window, ate a banana and went thankfully to sleep.

FILMS IN JAPAN: The role of Hollywood films in building democratic attitudes throughout Japan was considerably expanded in 1950, according to a Motion Picture Export association report from Tokyo.

For the past three years, the association, which represents America's major film distributors in Japan, has conducted an educational program, designed to drive home to the Japanese a fuller understanding of America and the American way of life. Using select American motion pictures as texts, a group of professional lecturers has been on continuous tour throughout Japan explaining and interpreting the cultural, social, and economic lessons to be derived from these films.

Because the "movie talks" have proved enormously popular with the Japanese public and have been hailed by American military government officials as an importan adjunct to its reorientation efforts, steps were taken last year to broaden the activity.

The lecture team was increased from four to six and its programming stepped up to reach greater numbers of Japanese in all parts of the nation. In 1950, the six lecturers delivered a total of 4,236 talks—almost twice the number given in the previous year. The lectures were presented in schools, theaters, municipal halls, auditoriums, and commercial establishments throughout the country to an aggregate audience of more than 1,450,000 people.

Pictures like "The Yearling," "Naked City," "Best Years of Our Lives," "The Beginning or the End," "Chicken Every Sunday," "Green Grass of Wyoming," "Sitting Pretty," "Little Women," "State Fair," "The Boy With Green Hair," "The Jolson Story," and "Down to the Sea in Ships" are typical of last year's film releases that provided constructive topical material.
