McKechnie Is Father to His Players

Following is the fourth and last of a series on prospects of the major league baseball teams.

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY

TAMPA, Fla.— (U.P.) —A few paragraphs about Bill McKechnie, the Moses who may lead Cincinnati out of the Baseball wilderness.

A practical man, McKechnie isn't given to shooting off his mouth about what he thinks about anything. He positively won't set himself up as a forecaster of future events. When he gives off an opinion, it's as gilt-edged as a government bond.

Ever since he was a third baseman in the old Ohio and Pennsylvania, and Central leagues, he's never missed an opportunity to go home or see his family.

BILL MCKECHNIE

". . . forgive much . . ."

* * * *

He's gotten off a sleeper at 3 a. m. and caught trains at daybreak to spend a few hours with his loved ones in Wilkinsburg, Pa.

Father to His Players

He has four children, Billy, who is married, Bee, who attends Penn State, Jimmy, who is 13 and here with him, and Carroll, 7. At the time of his marriage both he and his wife were singing in the choir of the Methodist church at Wilkinsburg. Bill sings baritone.

He's more of a father with his players than he is a manager. He handles each player differently and will go further with one type than he will with another. He doesn't stand for any foolishness or horse play.

Even at 52 and after 16 years of major league managing, McKechnie makes no attempt to elevate himself above his players. When he first joined the Reds, he was told the number of his drawing room on the train going north after spring training. He asked if all the players were going to have drawing rooms. Told they were not, he said, "Well, what's good enough for my players it good enough for me. I sleep in a lower."

Lincoln A Favorite

McKechnie will spend unending time on small problems. Even when he was a player he used to keep a rake in his locker and be his own groundkeeper for the territory around third where he played.

He is crazy about cakes, all kinds of desserts and home cooking. He has a collection of pipes, including one specially built model with a crooked stem which he can smoke when he's hunting and doesn't have to take out of his mouth to shoot. He also smokes cigarettes, using an ivory holder.

His favorite literature is historical biography. "Honest Abe" Lincoln is one of his favorite historical characters.

His dress is plain and simple. He likes white shirts and is partial to bow ties. He has his suits tailor-made of the finest quality woolens. He prefers quality above quantity in clothes.

He believes baseball is a young man's game, and will forgive much in a youngster who is hustling and trying to improve himself.

On the field he tries to let the players think for themselves, and is constantly striving to build up the confidence of each of his men. He wants every man to be able to think for himself in an emergency.

When he loses a tough ball game he shuns company until he cools down. He has been known to sit for hours by himself in the park after losing a close one.
