LUCKY TWIST

TAMPA, Kan. (U.P.)—Fred Dalinger figures he's both unlucky and lucky as far as tornadoes go. His farm has been hit twice in a year by twisters, smashing crops and several sheds and grain bins but—the farm house has been spared in each instance and no member of his family was hurt.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby

Sometimes a defender's best play is simple and painless, but in today's hand we see a defensive play that was both ingenious and risky.

West opened the queen of clubs, and dummy won with the ace. When South had to follow suit with the king, it was quite clear to everybody at the table that South had started the hand with a singleton club.

Declarer's next step, naturally enough, was to take the spade finesse. The queen of spades rode around to West's king, and now West had to make the important decision.

Opening lead—♣ Q

It was perfectly clear that South had three aces for his opening bid and his later strong bidding. It was equally clear that the defenders could take only one spade and one heart, and therefore needed two diamond tricks to defeat the contract.

West's "normal" defensive play was to lead the king of diamonds. Obviously, this would not produce two diamond tricks for the defenders. South would surely win with the ace of diamonds, and West could eventually take the queen of diamonds, but dummy's jack of diamonds would remain to control the suit.

All of these flashed through West's mind since West was an experienced bridge player. As a result, West was able to make an ingenious but risky return without much hesitation. He led back the deuce of diamonds.

Now look at the hand from declarer's point of view. When the deuce of diamonds is returned, it doesn't seem likely that West has led from the king and queen of diamonds. Hence South does not expect to gain by playing dummy's jack of diamonds.

There was a fair chance, South thought, that West had led from some diamond combination that included the ten. In any such case, the winning procedure was to play a low diamond from dummy.

When South played a low diamond from dummy, East naturally played the ten of diamonds, and South had to win with the ace. This gave West two diamond tricks, which he was able to cash when he gained the lead with the king of hearts.

West had given declarer a chance to make 11 tricks, but his risky diamond return was the only defensive play that had any chance to defeat the contract.
