NAMES IN THE NEWS: For the first time, Aaron Copland this June will conduct an opera. It's his "The Tender Land," to be featured at the third annual Festival of the Creative Arts at Brandeis university, Waltham, Mass.

Gossip columns report the impending marriage of Steve Allen and Jayne Meadows, television stars.

Impressed by Universal-International's success in filming "The Glenn Miller Story," Benny Goodman has given the company permission to do his biography. Aaron Rosenberg and Valentine Davies, who wrote the Miller picture, will be teamed again on the Goodman story. Benny will not appear, but will reorganize his old band to make the sound track, then probably would take it on tour.

Maxwell Anderson will receive, on May 26, the gold medal for drama given by the National Institute of Arts and Letters. The medal is given for "distinguished achievement covering the entire work of the recipient." The playwright's output has included "Both Your Houses," "Winterset," "What Price Glory?," and "Anne of the Thousand Days."

Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen will co-star in "Alice in Wonderland" on NBC-TV Wednesday, May 5.

Kurt Adler, Metropolitan Opera conductor, will be musical director for productions of "Faust" and "Ariadne auf Naxos" at Central City, Colo., during June and July. Singers engaged thus far are Mimi Benzell and Brian Sullivan.

Bobby Clark, stage comedian, will be starred in CBS-TV's Easter show. Gwen Verdon and Doretta Morrow of the Broadway musical stage also have been signed.

Robert L. Joseph has bought for production next season a play by Jean Giraudoux entitled "La Guerre de Troie n'Aura pas Lieu." The play, which is a satirical comedy, was done in Paris in 1935 by Louis Jovet.

When Edwin Lester presents Mary Martin in "Peter Pan" on the West coast this summer, the Barrie fantasy will be enhanced by a new score which is being written by Carolyn Leigh and Marx Charlop, two new composers. Jerome Robbins will stage the musical, which will open July 19 in San Francisco.

Shirley Jones, the chorus girl in "Me and Juliet" who is virtually set for the feminine lead in the screen version of "Oklahoma!" will take over the part of Juliet for the road tour of the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical.

What Reviewers Need These Days, Says Author, Are More Whiskers

(While John Crosby is on vacation, his column is being conducted by guest writers.)

By P. G. WODEHOUSE

This matter of literary critics or, as they are sometimes called, book reviewers. What has come over the boys these days? Just a lot of sissies they seem to me. Where is the old vim, the old pep?

Bless my soul, I can remember the time when reviewers lived on raw meat, and an author who published a book did so at his own risk and generally came out of the encounter feeling as if he had been hit by an atom bomb and forcibly unclothed in public.

WODEHOUSE

But now the question "Have you read any good books lately?" is one which it is impossible to answer.

To hear the reviewers tell it, there are no good books nowadays — only superb books, astounding books, vital books, and books which we are not ashamed to say brought tears to our eyes.

Some people (who ought to be ashamed of themselves) attribute this tidal wave of sweetness and amiability to the fact that so many reviewers are novelists themselves.

Old Bill, they say, who writes for the "Booksy Weekly," is not going to jump on Old Joe's "Sundered Souls" when he knows that his own "Storm Over Flatbush" is coming out next week and that Joe runs the book page of "The Spokesman."

This, of course, is not so. Nobody who really knows novelists and their flaming integrity would believe it for a moment.

It is with genuine surprise that William, having added "Sundered Souls" to the list of the world's masterpieces, finds a week later that Joseph has done the same by "Storm Over Flatbush." An odd coincidence, he feels.

No, the root of the whole trouble is that reviewers today, with the exception of a few of the younger set who have a sort of unpleasant downy growth alongside the ears, are all clean-shaven.

The connection between whiskers and caustic criticism is not hard to see.

There is probably nothing which so soothes a man and puts him in a frame of mind to see only good in everything as a nice clean shave. He feels his smooth, pink cheeks, and the milk of human kindness begins to gurgle within him.

"What a day!" he says as he looks out of the window. "What an egg!" he says as he starts his breakfast. And if he is a literary critic, "What a book!" he feels as he takes up the latest effort of some author who ought to be selling coal instead of writing novels.

But let a man omit to shave, and mark the result. He feels hot and scrubby. Within twelve hours his outlook has become jaundiced and captious.

If his interests lie in the direction of politics, he goes out and investigates someone. If he is an employer of labor, he starts a lock-out.

And if he is a reviewer, he sits down to write his review with the determination that by the time he has finished reading it the author will know he has been in a fight.

You have only to look about you to appreciate the truth of this. All whiskered things are testy and short-tempered . . . pumas, wild cats, the old Edinburgh reviewers and — in the mating season — shrimps.

Would Ben Johnson have knifed a man on account of some literary disagreement if he had not been whiskered to the eyebrows? Can you imagine a nation of spruce, clean - shaven Bolsheviks, smelling of witch hazel?

There is only one thing to be done. We must go back to whiskers.

And there must be no half measures. It is not enough for a critic to have a beard like Rex Stout's, which, though technically a beard, is not bushy enough to sour the natural kindliness of his disposition.

We must have the old Assyrian stuff, the sort of beards Hebrew minor prophets wore and those great, cascading, spade - shaped things grown by the great Victorians — whether under glass or not has never been ascertained. Then we shall begin to get somewhere.

I realize that I shall suffer myself from the change. There will be no more of those eulogies of my work like "Another Wodehouse" or "8 by 10½, 255 pp" which I have been pasting into my scrapbook for so many years.

But I am prepared to sacrifice myself for the sake of literature, and I know that a sudden outcropping of whiskers among critics would raise the whole standard of writing.

A young author would think twice before starting his introspective novel of adolescence if he knew that it would be handed over for review to somebody who looked like the late Wilkie Collins.

Nervous women would stop writing altogether, and what a break that would be for the reading public. The only novelists who would carry on would be a small, select group of tough eggs who had the stuff.

And let us have no bleating pleas from the critics that they can't do it. Of course they can do it.

It is perfectly easy to grow whiskers. Bennet Cerf's stories do it. So do wrestlers.

Are our star reviewers going to tell me that they are inferior in will power and determination to the untutored men you see jumping on each other's stomachs on television?

Tush!
