Understanding CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

It may seem odd for me to be calling attention to the fears of parents but the letters I get from troubled fathers and mothers indicate many fears in regard to their children. One of the most frequent is the fear that if they curb a child's desire to do too much of a good thing — something which seems harmful to his health, his school work — a child will resent and disobey them. In short, they are afraid to compel their children to do what is right and what is best for them to do.

A 12-year-old girl in junior high school is all bound up in the idea of being popular with her "crowd." The "crowd" is a group who pays more attention to hair-dos, sweaters, boy friends and popularity than to lessons. This child has had the second warning note from the office. When her parents said she would have to cut down her social activities until her marks improve she called them "stuffed shirts" and said as usual, "Everybody's doing it. You want me to be a wash-out?" And the poor parents were afraid she might resent their interference and hate them.

Let us look at the facts, for facts are what count. This child and every other who takes such an attitude is still a child and has not yet developed the maturity of control, judgement, reason and common sense to go on her own and must be directed, guided, controlled so that she learns to put important things first after learning what the important things are. This is the teaching all parents have to do.

A child does certain things and only when he is granted the experiences of obedience to essential rules of co-operation with the people who are working with him for his good, of learning how the love of his parents give him strength and protection and standing in his community will he gain the self-control and sound judgment essential for his maturity and his independence.

Fathers and mothers have their hands full nowadays in trying to bring their children through adolescence in sound health of mind, body and character. The opposition to their standards is strong and it is only when they summon strength more powerful than they can succeed.

The rearing of an adolescent boy or girl starts with his birth and never lets up until he is well on the road to self-mangement. This is a 20-year, night-and-day job, and never easy. School, church and the right society are great helps and they are sorely needed.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Q—From where do most of the trained circus seals come?

A—They are nearly always California sea lion cows.

Q—Do turtles have teeth?

A—No turtles have teeth. But the jaws have horny edges that can cut hard substances and some turtles can make painful cuts.

Q—Who has charge of the Great Seal of the United States?

A—The Secretary of State. He must impress it on all important documents. Laws do not take effect until he has put the Great Seal on them.

Q—Is it true that there are cycles in biology?

A — Statistics indicate the existence of many cycles. Every 62 years the elephant population reaches its peak. Field mice increase in a cycle of four years.

Q—In what year was the Australian ballot first used in the United States?

A—It was first officially adopted in 1888 by Massachusetts. Nine more states adopted it in 1889.

Advice on Your HEALTH

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN M.D.

Cooperation of specialists in many fields is needed to correct the physical defects and speech impediment caused by cleft palate and cleft lip. Experts in plastic surgery, hearing, breathing, dentistry and speech re-education can work together to cure this mistake of nature.

A cleft palate or a hare lip occurs when the tissues forming the lip and palate fail to grow together.

Disfiguring Mark

A harelip generally occurs on the upper lip, either on one or both sides. In addition to disfiguring the appearance of the child, it also makes it difficult for him to breathe and speak.

Malformation of the hard palate, the roof of the front of the mouth, and the soft palate, the roof of the back of the mouth, prevents them from carrying out their functions.

Cleft Palate

A cleft palate permits the stream of air we use for speech to go up and out the nose. This is what causes the nasal speech characteristic of persons with cleft palate or harelip. Since the roof of the mouth is not complete, the tubes leading to the middle ear cavity are exposed. The result is poor hearing.

The defects usually can be repaired completely by a plastic surgeon.

A special dental device assists the patient in controlling sounds for speech as well as improving his appearance. The other specialists then contribute their efforts toward complete cure.

If your child is born handicapped with a cleft palate or lip, do not blame yourself. These malformations are an error of nature.

Actual Cause

Heredity does appear to play a part in their development, but we do not know the actual cause.

It is usually advisable to begin repairs fairly early in childhood, although each is an individual case. Sometimes a doctor might advise that closing of a cleft in the palate be delayed for months or even years.

But whether corrective steps are begun now or are postponed by your doctor, do not worry. Cleft palates and lips usually can be repaired.
