Tommy Dorsey To Be Guest On Templeton Hour Monday

Sentimental Gentleman With Trombone Will Play Both Sweet And Hot As He And Musical Mimic Show Talents

Tommy Dorsey, that sentimental gentleman with the trombone, will play both sweet and hot as a guest of Alec Templeton during the musical mimic's broadcast, Monday at 9:30 p. m., over WEAF.

The two talented musicians will go in for a bit of musical nonsense with Dorsey making his trombone sound like a 'cello, a saxophone, a viola or a flute, while Templeton will put his instrument thru its paces in his own inimitable style. A chorus of 12 mixed voices will be heard with the orchestra.

It will not be "elemental, my dear Watson" when Sherlock Holmes solves the mystery of the "Devil's Foot" over WJZ Monday at 8 p. m. Basil Rathbone plays the famed Baker Street sleuth and another film star, Nigel Bruce, portrays the kindly Dr. Watson. Virginia Verrill, famous Broadway songstress and beauty, will be guest star next Monday at 8:30 p. m. over WEAF on the Tommy Riggs and Betty Lou program. Miss Verrill's specialty number will be "Are You Having Any Fun?" Tommy Riggs will sing "Scatterbrain," and Betty Lou, his vocal other personality, will do "Piggy Wiggy Woo." Freddy Rich and the orchestra will supply the music, and will give a special orchestration of the favorite Mexican song, "El Rancho Grande." David Ross, the golden-voiced announcer, Charley Kemper, Teddy ("Blubber") Gergman, and others, will participate in the proceedings.

An interesting program of familiar melodies against a background of novel orchestral arrangements will be presented by Andre Kostelanetz and his "Tune-Up Time" principals Monday at 8 p. m. over WABC.

Master-of-ceremonies, Tony Martin has chosen the amusing "Go Fly A Kite" from the musical movie, "The Star-Maker" for his opening solo. Later in the broadcast, Tony will also be heard singing "When I'm Looking At You," one of the famous love ballads from the "Rogue Song."

For his orchestral selections, Maestro Kostelanetz will play his own composition, "The Man On The Flying Trapeze," a contrapuntal novelty inspired by the popular song of the same title. In sharp contrast to this lively composition the other featured orchestra selection will be a tone poem arrangement of the romantic ballad, "Moonlight Madonna."

Dagwood, a pushover for a high pressure salesman, buys the rights to "The House With a Voice With a Smile," on the Blondie broadcast, Monday at 7:30 p. m. over WABC. Dagwood's purchase is a radio beam gadget which startles visitors to the Bumstead mansion by saying, "Welcome, welcome. Sit down. We'll be back in ten minutes," the instant people step on the front porch. Billy Artz provides the musical background.

A song she first sang from the manuscript — Ernest Charles' "Sweet Song of Long Ago" — will be sung by Margaret Speaks on the Voice of Firestone program over WEAF Monday at 8:30 p. m. She introduced the composition of young Charles, then an unknown, soon after she first came to radio. Shortly afterward, Miss Speaks sang an all-Charles concert at the Hotel Vanderbilt in New York, every song from manuscript.

The prima donna also will sing Herbert's "Neath the Southern Moon," Ehben, ne andro lotana, from Satalani's "La Wally, and Schertzinger's "One Night of Love." Alfred Wallenstein will conduct the orchestra in Friedmann's "Slavonic Rhapsody No. 2,' Strauss' "You and You" and McDowell's "To a Wild Rose."

Six states will be represented on the "Salute to the Cities" schedule for the fall season, with seven cities being honored in as many weeks on the weekly broadcast heard over WLW Monday from 11:30 p. m., to 12 midnight.

The series will include Evansville, Ind., October 16; Kankakee, Ill., October 23; Memphis, Tenn., October 30; Clarksburg, W. Va., November 6; Athens, Ohio, November 13; Bowling Green, Ky., November 20 and Lafayette, Ind., November 27.

The program will include historical narratives concerning the city honored, and music by the WLW concert orchestra, directed by Uberto Neely.

Lincoln's Early Life Told In Epic Picture At Lyric

Charlie Chan Solves Two Murders In Current Quilna Attraction; Sigma Film Stars Joe E. Brown, Martha Raye

Thrills, laughs and romance are many in "Young Mr. Lincoln," starring Henry Fonda, Marjorie Weaver and Alice Brady, now at the Lyric theatre. One of the high points of interest is Lincoln saving two brothers from an angry mob.

Second picture is "Irish Luck," with Frankie Darro and Dick Purcell.

Charlie Chan meets a magician-criminal in "Chan at Treasure Island," current Quilna film. This time the action takes place at the San Francisco fair where two murders are committed. Sidney Toler portrays Chan.

Highly entertaining is "Stop, Look and Love," which completes the bill. It stars Jean Rogers and Eddie Collins.

Showing at the Sigma is "$1,000 a Touchdown," a story of two young persons attempting to put a bankrupt college on its feet. Joe E. Brown is seen as a football coach while Martha Raye is the owner of the college.

The lovely Ginger Rogers is back in "Fifth Avenue Girl," at the Ohio theatre. This time she is cast as a poor girl who lives in the home of a millionaire. It is thru her efforts that the family gets out of trouble. This film will show until Wednesday when "The French Follies," commence.

Making its bid with State fans is "Hell's Kitchen," with the tough but likeable "Dead End Kids." For the first time the "kids" are seen as reformers; cleaning up a city which is run by crooked politicians. Margaret Lindsay and Ronald Reagan have big roles. Second picture is "The Girl and the Gambler," a tale of thrilling romance in Old Mexico.

Two of Hollywood's best liked actors Lew Ayres and Lionel Barrymore are in "Calling Dr. Kildare," half of the Majestic bill. Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland furnish laughs in "Boy Trouble."

QUILNA

You'll never know how exciting a movie can be until you run down to the Quilna theatre and see "Charlie Chan at Treasure Island," the latest and greatest of the mystery thrillers, with Sidney Toler again proving himself the ideal choice for the role of the beloved Earl Derr Biggers detective!

This time Chan goes to the San Francisco World's Fair to solve the most amazing crime riddle of his career and to track down a master of the occult who deals death insidiously and mysteriously via a psychic arrow.

Last night's audience followed Chan with breathless interest as he sped from thrilling situation to thrilling situation, defying the supernatural to expose the elusive murderer.

In his latest adventure, the famous sleuth enlists the aid of Rhadini, the great magician, played by Cesar Romero. And, of course, Chan's No. 2 son, in the person of Sen Yung, is never far away from the scene of danger.

Pauline Moore has an unusual role as the mind-reader in Rhadini's act at the Temple of Magic on Treasure Island, and others prominently featured in the top-notch cast are Douglas Fowley, June Gale, Douglas Dumbrille, Sally Blane, Billie Seward, Wally Vernon and Donald MacBride. All turn in grand performances, under the expert direction of Norman Foster, who, incidentally is Miss Blane's husband.

John Larkin contributed the thrill-packed and highly entertaining original story and screen play, and Edward Kaufman was associate producer.

SIGMA

Moviegoers who have come to expect the ultimate in rib-splitting comedy from Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye, have a distinct treat in store in the new college comedy, $1,000 a Touchdown," at the Sigma theatre. For this picture marks the first joint starring appearance of Joe and Martha, and turns them loose in a story which packs amiable antics, romance and football thrills, combined in just the proper proportions to suit the talents of the two comedians.

Aware that he had two all-American mirth-provoking assets on his hands in Joe and Martha, Director James Hogan chose his supporting cast with an eye to comedy and romance. Eric Blore, the screen's leading "gentleman's gentleman," is cast in an important feature role as Martha's butler. Susan Hayward, member of Paramount's "Golden Circle," select group of youngsters slated for stardom, joins with handsome John Hartley to form a romantic team, while another "Golden Circler," Joyce Mathews, rounds out the top featured cast.

The story gets under way with Joe resigning himself to failure as an actor, and all because he loses his voice when more than ten people confront him. Martha's more or less a failure, too, for her only asset is broken down Madison college, left to her by her ancestors.

When Joe seeks a cure, he meets Martha in the doctor's office. Joe's plight and Martha's family pride inspire her to attempt to make a go of the college again. Martha's first move is to borrow money from an old miser who holds the mortgage on the school. She installs Joe as president, enlists a stranded troupe of actors as a faculty, and opens for business.

For reasons which are not apparent to Joe and Martha at first, the student body fails to arrive. Joe takes care of that by "recruiting" a football team from other schools, and coaching it, even tho he can't talk to all eleven men at once. But because of the way in which the players were obtained, no other school will play the team. Martha gets around that by arranging for an exhibition game with a champion pro team. That fixes things up in one of the most thrilling and laugh-packed comedy climaxes ever filmed.

To add moments of melody to the comedy and thrills, Martha sings a new Robin-Rainger hit tune, "I Spell Love With a Capital You."

OHIO

The adventures of a sidewalk Cindrella who is paid a salary to upset a millionaire household, forms the often hilarious basis of "Fifth Avenue Girl," Ginger Rogers' new solo starring picture at the Ohio.

Miss Rogers undertakes an odd task, that of uniting a badly spoiled and selfish family by appearing to be a menace to their carefree existence. The nominal head of the household, Walter Connolly, is neglected and lonely; his wife and children think of him only as one-man mint, and he realizes that something drastic has to be done.

Accordingly he brings Miss Rogers to stay with him, following a hectic evening of night-clubbing with her after he has found her in Central Park. Her presence shocks the thoughtless wife and the two grown-up children into behaving themselves and into paying some attention to their husband and father.

Out of this laughter-packed situation arises the many uproarious comedy scenes of the film, along with plenty of fast-moving romance and contrasting dramatic moments. Tim Holt and a new "find" from the "Gate to Hollywood" talent quest, Kathryn Adams, play the two children, and Verree Teasdale the wife, with James Ellison as a class-conscious chauffeur.
