LOOKING AT LIFE

By ERICH BRANDEIS

There is a fairly new song out which you hear everywhere you go. It is called "Little Things Mean a Lot," and tells all about a girl who doesn't care for diamonds and pearls because they cost only money; and what is money, after all?

At least that is what the song says and, perhaps, the only reason money is mentioned is because the author of the lyrics had to find a rhyme with "honey."

Which reminds me of a cartoon I saw the other day showing two scantily dressed chorus girls. One of them says to the other, "Well, I can tell you one thing happiness can't buy." "What can't happiness buy?" asks the other one. "Money," replies the first.

If so far this column doesn't seem to make much sense, let me explain.

A few days ago the Belgian government presented the United Nations with a beautiful tapestry, to be hung in the delegates' entrance to the General Assembly Building.

The huge work is really beautiful. It depicts Mother Earth, representing the United Nations, stopping a fight between groups of men. In the center doves of peace fly around a Fountain of Good Will.

But in sending out the story of the magnificent gift, this is how they described it. "It measures 43 1-2 feet by 28 1-2 feet, weighs 300 pounds and contains 94,000 miles of yarn.

"Fourteen men worked a year to make the tapestry, whose wool and jute would stretch four times around the Equator. The designer won a nationwide contest among more than 100 artists."

This description is so typical of so many things that happen in the United Nations and in other high places. Figures. Statistics. Bigness. Words. Will that ever bring peace? Or is it the idea behind all the verbose balderdash that will eventually make us come to our senses?

There was also an item about a reception at which Mayor Wagner of New York was host to some 1,200 persons at the Waldorf Astoria, half of them from the United Nations.

The story did not say anything about how well all these different nationalities got along; how friendly they were; how easy it seemed for them to find a common meeting ground.

No, it told about an elaborate assortment of special dishes that were served at the buffet. It told of the 20 kinds of appetizers, three salads, four entrees, cheeses, fruits and sweets, as well as coffee and liqueurs.

"Among the dishes offered were Egyptian gratin of lamb, French pate de foie gras en croute, Flemish carbonade of beef with small dumplings, and Russian vegetable salad.

"Natives (which means Americans, I suppose), were reassured with old-fashioned black bean soup."

In Athens, Irene, the daughter of Zeus and Themis, was worshipped as the goddess of peace. She was represented in art as a maiden holding a cornucopia in her left arm and an olive branch in her right.

It seems to me that a carton of bicarbonate of soda in at least one of them might be more appropriate if Irene were our goddess of peace today.

Fix It Yourself

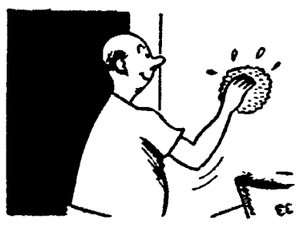
BEFORE YOU PAINT



What with all these new fast drying odorless paints, the great range in stock colors and new and improved methods of application, some several million people will probably be doing their own interior decorating this month. Some of the jobs are going to turn out bad and the chances are that the reason the bad ones were bad is that the paint was applied over a dirty surface.

It doesn't make any difference if you are painting over wallpaper, old paint or a fresh unpainted surface—if there are dust, dirt and grease on the surface the paint is either not going to hold or is going to dry with streaks in it. The rlue to follow is to be sure and wash the surface before you apply the paint. With all the soot and smog about these days almost every surface that has been around for a few months is likely to have a thin coating of something and, of course, it's a dead certainty that there will be a thin coat of grease on the walls and ceilings of bathrooms and kitchens.

For ordinary surfaces, plain soap and water will do fine for removing the dirt and after the surface has been washed, rinse with clear water. If the dirt won't respond to this treatment, try a little washing soda with the water. About the best thing to use for the job is a sponge for with this you can keep most of the excess water from dropping onto the floor. But just to play safe, cover the floor with a cloth or papers before you start to work. And it's best if you start at the bottom of the wall and work up.

Look Your Best

IF new 40-inch coat—

Slim pleated or sheath skirts look smart under shorter coat but full, flared skirt is not a smart silhouette under 40-inch length.

Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate

MISS I. C.—The new daytime silhouette is very slim with natural shoulders and mounted sleeves, but the mounting, especially for coats, is often an inch further out than the real shoulders. Broader shoulders require a slim skirtline.
