Make Yourself a Job

with ED BISHOP
The Idea Hunter

A carpenter in Houston, physically incapacitated for hard labor, made a few toy windmills for his daughter and, as a result, has a specialty business that is paying him more than he ever made in his life. From his own family, the idea soon spread among the neighborhood children. The beauty and gracefulness of the toys came to the notice of a landscape gardener and the carpenter began to receive orders for larger and more substantial models to be placed in gardens and on landscaped estates, for which new ideas are always in demand. The windmills are designed after huge power plants common to Holland and painted bright colors.

Some simple new idea, properly broadcast, may put 1000 men back to work. If you know any idea, actually working, help spread the news by sending full details to Ed Bishop, care of this newspaper.
