Make Yourself a Job WITH ED BISHOP The Idea Hunter

A cultured woman in New York, suddenly forced to support herself, turned to the one thing she knew best, books, as an emergency source of livelihood and has found a permanent business. She solicited work caring for libraries of friends and acquaintances and in a short time obtained thirty clients. She oils leather-bound volumes about once a year, periodically dusts and cleans inside and out, classifies and checks for repairs to volumes under her care. She now has yearly contracts to care for several large collections, one of which contains more than 7000 volumes. She requires the services of several bookbinders as well as highly skilled artisans for special work, and has built a lasting business for herself.

Some simple new ideas, properly broadcast, may pay back to you. If you have any idea, actually working, help spread the news by sending full details to Ed Bishop, care of this newspaper.
