$100,000 Is Spent To Reproduce Welsh Village

Razing Will Cost Plenty, Says Zanuck

Town To Be Torn Down And Site Restored To Respectable Pasture

By CHARLES R. MOORE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

CERRIG CEINNEN, Calif., Aug. 2—(UP)—Here, some 50 miles from Hollywood, the moving picture people have constructed a small corner of Wales.

It was built from photographs of a village which since has been bombed to pieces and is so authentic that the real Welsh actors get homesick.

Darryl F. Zanuck, producing "How Green Was My Valley," for 20th Century-Fox, spent more than $100,000 building it and estimates it will cost a like amount to tear it down and make a respectable cow pasture of it again.

That is one of the headaches involved in making pictures on somebody else's cow pasture. You not only have to build your set but you have to tear it down again and put things into such shape that the cows will never know you've been there.

The mining village of Cerrig Ceinnen, Glamorgan, Wales, has been simulated along the edge of the San Fernando valley. It is a spot no movie camera has poked into before, altho many an another-Indian-but-the-dust melodrama has been filmed in the area around Calabasas, a few miles away.

Cerrig Ceinnen is located atop a hill, its main street running up to the coal mine which furnishes employment, part of the time, for the village's residents.

To this village Director John Ford each morning leads an expedition of about 300 people, including 70 Welsh singing actors. They spend the day at work there, then trek back to Hollywood by bus in the evening.

There is a stone chapel, a row of stone cottages, shops and four taverns. Coal mining, even for the movies, is a thirsty business. Posters advertised some 20 brands of Welsh ale but all anyone could actually buy was soda pop.

The chapel, in the shade of a large oak tree, dominates the central part of the village.

Director Ford said it was the only part of the set with which he was not completely satisfied.

"That oak tree," he said, "is too perfect. No one will believe it is real, and not just put there by the prop department."

Today Ford was shooting at the pit ahead.

It took all day to film the dramatic scene in which the mine is closed and sooty-faced miners, angry and despairing, march back to their homes.

Their women watch silently for a time, then burst into an emotional Welsh anthem. The men join them as they walk toward their homes, the procession dwindling as one after the other turns into his yard.

MAN AND WIFE KILLED

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 2—(UP)—Irving Clarence Masterson, 60, of Malta, O., and his wife were killed last night when their automobile collided with a truck driven by Williams Phelps of Evansville, Ill. The smashup happened on a highway near Pike, W. Va.

Nite Life Footnotes

RATHSKELLER — Downtown Lima's brightest night club. By no means a quiet little nook, celebrants are assured of high wattage entertainment by watching fellow wassailers. And the place is quite cool, also.

MILANO — Have you been in this one since they swept out the dark corners, put a fancy canopy over the bar and sloshed on a brave new paint job? 'S wonderful.

CASTLE FARM — Revue Risque is now being flaunted before the pop-eyed populace dallying here. Sassy stuff is perpetrated by the fillies of the chorus line to say nothing of quaint cracks by those elastic named comedians, Long and Short.

BARR RAINBOW ROOM—This place affords the nearest thing to comfort we've enjoyed since hammock and palm leaf fan days. The atmosphere is mostly calm and peaceful except when the nimble conga clompers begin nickelodeon nipups.

COURT CAFE — One of the first spots in the village to introduce barbecued ribs; ever since then the proprietor has been quick on the uptake for the new and different in palate appeasement. That goes double for grog formulas.

STONE'S GRILL—Loud laughter and pleasant smiles seem to be perpetually associated with this station of Stone's. Quite a variety of brew is available for those who have a shifting beer taste.

KIRWAN GRILL—Swank service sans high prices characterizes the new grill policy. As such has attained considerable fame for being one of eating places in Limaland where you get exactly what you order.

BLINKING OWL — An out-in-the-country place where cool breezes blow incessantly. Traditionally popular with rural fun seekers, the Owl now attracts a large following of city folks who like comfort-conditioned eating and drinking.

Many Thrills Promised In State's Film

Thrills, excitement and stark drama mingle with heart-interest in "A Woman's Face," story of a woman turned criminal thru ugliness, who works out her regeneration with a new-found beauty, starring Joan Crawford and Melvyn Douglas, with Conrad Veidt in a powerful supporting role, the picture comes Sunday to the State theatre.

Miss Crawford plays the scarred woman, enemy of mankind, restored to beauty by Douglas' plastic surgery, but the slave of a criminal madman, played by Veidt. The struggle between the two men, one offering sanctuary from a cruel world, the other a chance to change her fate, provides gripping moments.

Players include Osa Massen, Reginald Owen, Albert Bassermann, Marjorie Main, Donald Meeks, Connie Gilchrist, Richard Nicholas, Charles Quigley and Gwih Andre.

Amid the dramatic and poignant heart moments are thrills such as a wild cable ride over a roaring gorge, a breakneck race against death in sleighs drawn by galloping horses, and other exciting episodes. The picture is beautifully costumed and staged.

A gay, sparkling comedy with plenty of laughs makes its local debut today when "Here Comes Happiness" also opens at the State theatre Sunday. The film starring Mildred Coles, Edward Norris and Richard Ainley, is a mirthful story.

Book Reviews

By MARY LATHROP
Lima Public Library Staff

NO ONE NOW WILL KNOW. By Edmee Elizabeth DeLaPasture. Harper and Brothers. $2.50.

This novel is at the same time a distinguished presentation of character based on sound psychology and the laws of heredity and a grippingly dramatic story. Beginning in 1939 in France, the plot goes back thru time to 1872 in South Wales. It tells the story of Callie Lampriere, and the tragic circumstances which broke up an unusually loving family; and why Lucian died almost unmentioned in the south of France.

This is a sharp departure from Miss DeLaPasture's usual homespun quality of writing; it is unusual in its theme and extraordinarily well-written.

GOD HAS A LONG FACE. By Robert Wilder. G. P. Putnam's Sons. $2.50.

In this book you will meet the general, as lovable an old scoundrel as ever appeared in an American novel. After the Civil war, Basil Wallis Burgoyne, who decided to call himself a general because the country was 'so ful of colonels'—went to Florida where he carved an empire out of the wilderness. He cut a considerable swath wherever he went and could always outshout and outfight any two men. It is a colorful story on a grand scale, overflowing with incident and American to the very core.

* * *

OUT OF THIS FURNACE By Thomas Bell. Little, Brown and Company. $2.50.

Of all the writers who have come out of our so-called 'new immigration,' from southern and southeastern Europe, none deserves more acclaim than Thomas Bell. In fact he is as important in fiction as Louis Adamic is in non-fiction.

He portrays vividly the Slav workers in the steel mills thru five decades and in so doing he makes a saga of brave and humble people.

The story is gripping and realistic and definitely significant as a sociological novel.

THERE'S ROSEMARY . . . THERE'S RUE. By Winifred Fortescue. Houghton Mifflin Co. $3.00.

With a fragrance of another day hanging about it, this autobiography tells the life of the wife of Sir John Fortescue, librarian of Windsor Castle and historian of the British army. Her early life is an English rural rectory, her days on the stage, and her happy years of marriage with Sir John are recounted charmingly and amusingly. You will be perhaps more impressed by an old-fashioned personal charm in the book than by the author's varied career.

Perhaps a little over-sweet at times but the spice is there too.

* * *

MEN AND POLITICS. By Louis Fischer. Duell, Sloan and Pearce. $3.50.

Of all the books written by foreign correspondents this is the most important and valuable of our time. Louis Fischer has come back to America with clear insights into the affairs of Europe.

He shows that 1939 was implicit in 1919; that the period between the two dates was a period of war—war carried on by concealed, non-military methods.

Louis Fischer has particularly rich memories of Leninist Russia, but he speaks authoritatively on all central Europe. He can appraise as well as describe the significance of the European tragic era with which he has been in such close contact.
