Army And Navy Pictures To Be Presented At The Lyric

"23½ Hours Leave" And "Sweetheart Of The Navy," Are Scheduled To Open Engagement On Tuesday

How a snappy and self-assured young sergeant in a U. S. Army camp in 1917 dares to bet his mates that he will eat breakfast with the general, whom he has never seen, and how he wins the wager, forms the farcial background for the film, "23½ Hours Leave," commencing Tuesday at the Lyric theatre. James Ellison and Terry Walker are the stars. Eric Linden and Cecelia Parker provide an interesting romance of the great branch of service in the co-feature, "Sweetheart of the Navy." Monday's films are "Secret Seven" and "Utah Trail."

George Raft and Marlene Dietrich are the high-voltage love team of the current film at the current film at the Ohio, "Manpower." Edward G. Robinson is co-starred with them in the powerful action story, with a strong supporting cast that includes Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Ward Bond, Eve Arden, Joyce Compton and others.

In roles calling for the utmost in their not inconsiderable talents, Herbert Marshall and Virginia Bruce star in "Adventure in Washington," currently at the Quilna theatre. Young Gene Reynolds, new boy star, is an important member of the featured cast, which also includes Samuel S. Hinds, Ralph Morgan and Pierre Watkin.

Robert Benchley, comedian and author, has another role of "ordinary man in extraordinary situations" in Walt Disney's latest full-length picture, "The Reluctant Dragon," currently at the Sigma theatre. In this combination "live action" and animated feature, Benchley is turned loose within the very gates of the Disney studio.

At the State theatre the current film, "That Hamilton Woman" stars Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh in the unforgettable love story of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson. Others in the cast are Henry Wilcoxon, Alan Mowbray and Heather Angel. Co-featured is "The People vs. Dr. Kildare," starring Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day and Bonita Granville.

Showing for the last times Monday at the Majestic are "Border Legion" and "Second Chorus."

OHIO

Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich and George Raft are the co-starring trio of "Manpower," now at the Ohio.

The new film is set against a background of the Pacific coast's night life, where the hard-boiled linemen relax between the dangerous jobs of adjusting high tension power lines. Second home for most of them is the cheap and joyful Club "28," where they are entertained by the B-girls (dance hall hostesses), and forget the dangers of their daily life. It is a close little fraternity, the men bonded together by the hazards of their job.

Closest of these bonds is that between the two characters portrayed by Raft and Robinson. In a crashing electric storm, as they are dealing with hot wires, Raft is knocked unconscious, and Robinson attempting to save him, receives a permanent leg injury. Raft, in turn, drags him to safety. When he recovers, the two men are closer than ever.

Then Dietrich comes into their lives. She plays the daughter of one of the older linemen, and no better a B-girl than she should be. She has just come out of the penitentiary, and soon after her release her father is killed on the job. Robinson, whose character in the film is that of a simple, vigorous soul without too much insight, feels sorry for her, and over his friend's hard-bitten protests, marries her. They set up housekeeping in a small apartment.

Raft, injured in an accident, comes to stay with them and recuperate. Altho he is attracted by Dietrich, he refuses to meet her halfway when she plays up to him. She decides, since he will not have anything to do with her and she doesn't love Robinson, that she may as well go back to her old work. She goes to the club to ask the proprietor if she can have a job at his place in Chicago. While she is there, the place is raided and she goes to jail.

Raft hears about it and hurries down to the jail to get her out before Robinson finds out. Furious and disgusted with her, he slaps her down a flight of stairs, makes her promise to go back to her husband. But, determined to be honest, she tells Robinson she's going to leave him, that she loves Raft.

Murder in his heart, Robinson rushes out in a storm to find Raft. The ensuing clash has all the fury of a strong friendship turned to hate, and makes a thrilling finish to the powerful dramatic story.

SIGMA

Those who wonder how Donald Duck's voice gets on the screen will have the mystery cleared up for them when they see Walt Disney's full-length production "The Reluctant Dragon," which combines actual motion picture photography with Disney's own popular medium of art animated comedy.

The locale of the story is the Disney studio itself, with the work of making animated pictures carried on as a colorful background for the story action, which features Robert Benchley.

One of Benchley's initial experiences upon getting into the studio, not by his own free will, incidentally, is his witnessing of a recording session featuring the voices of Donald Duck and Clara Cluck, a part of his adventures landing up to the climatic screening of the animated feature comedy, "The Reluctant Dragon."

Audiences seeing the picture during its run at the Sigma theatre will find that the recording of the voices is as funny in its way as are the voices issuing from the beaks of Donald and Clara.

LYRIC

When "23½ Hours Leave," the Douglas MacLean production of Mary Rinehart's famous war-time comedy, which is coming to the Lyric theatre, was begun, it marked the first time a film producer, and a former film star, had made a picture in which someone else played the pet role of his screen career.

The silent version of "23½ Hours Leave" was the first comedy of army life to be filmed in the period just after the war, when Thomas H. Ince produced it. It proved an instant success as a silent film and, incidentally, served to skyrocket a young leading man to stardom. The young man was Douglas MacLean, who now has produced it with sound and dialogue with the personable young actor, James Ellison, in the role of Sergeant Gray which first made MacLean a star.

When Thomas H. Ince died and his estate was disposed of by his wife, Douglas MacLean bought the screen rights to the picture that had made him a star. It was largely a sentimental purchase, as shown by the fact that MacLean declined many tempting offers for the rights, the last of which would have netted him enough for the average man to retire on. But he always had in mind the day when he should have his own producing company and he wanted to film "23½ Hours Leave" again.

Both unknowns and established actors were tested. Talent scouts were sent out to contact the drama societies of the larger universities in the hope of uncovering a possible campus hero. New York stage actors were considered. But none of them satisfied MacLean. Then he saw James Ellison. "The Plainsman" and within forty eight hours he had tested young Ellison and signed him for his Sergeant Gray.

Which is one of the reason why "23½ Hours Leave" is one of the most interesting of the season's new film offerings. Hollywood doesn't recall any picture made under quite such conditions, for altho Douglas MacLean is not in the picture — to the eye — he is really in every foot of it. Sometimes the man behind the picture is just as evident as the actors, who are seen in it. And that's the care with "23½ Hours Leave."

When a pretty girl finds herself threatened with jail by a lot of hard boiled creditors, just because she has had a bad partner, who has been ungentlemanly enough to run out with all the cash and leave her with all the debts, something should be done about it.

At least that is the predicament in which lovely, Blonde Cecilia Parker finds herself in her latest picture, "Sweetheart of the Navy," the sparkling comedy with music which opens at the Lyric theatre on Tuesday with Eric Linden co-starred, and a strong supporting cast.

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 11—(INS)—Edwin J. Kiest, 79, publisher of The Daily Times Herald and owner of radio station KRLD, died early today in Medical Arts hospital. He would have been 80 years old Sept. 14.
