The Fellowship of Prayer

Prepared by
GAIUS GLENN ATKINS

"THAT THEY MAY ALL BE ONE": "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me . . . that they may all be one." John 17:20-21. Read John 17:18-23.

These words are a prayer, a promise and a vision: A vision of an always increasing Christian fellowship down the ages, around the world. A prayer that all Christian believers, in all their diversities, might still be one in faith and hope and charity. A promise that in the end they will all be one.

ATKINS

There are no words to say this morning, between Good Friday and Easter, how far that vision remains unfulfilled or how the promise of its realization is our only strong support. Statesmen plan as they can to put together a dissevered world. Churchmen seek a united Church. God speed them all. The only healing of the world's wounds is in the as yet unrealized power of the followers of Jesus Christ, through their unity, in the way and spirit of Jesus Christ, to become the answers to His prayer. That is our commission and our task.

Prayer: Forgive us, Father of all mercies, the dissensions which divide us and grant that by the unanimity of a good mind and the bonds of affection and the unity of our devotion to our Lord we may so become the answer to the Master's prayer, that they church may become the unwounded body of Christ and thy world, through the fidelity of all Christian disciles, be again at peace. Amen.

Seals Support Craft Project

Help Homebound Earn Money

A project under which articles made by severely crippled or handicapped persons in Dane county are sold, with the proceeds, less the costs of materials, going to the person who made the articles, is one of the programs partly financed through the sale of Easter Seals, officials of the Dane county unit of the Association for the Disabled pointed out today.

Under the program, carried out by the state rehabilitation department through the Madison vocational school, an instructor makes regular visits to homebound persons, shows them how to make articles, takes the items to the sales counter donated by Baron Brothers store, then takes the money to the workers when the items are sold.

Known as the Dane County Homecraft project, the program began in 1940. At first the articles were exhibited in store windows of the city and members of local civic groups donated their services as clerks. Later Baron Brothers donated a counter where the products could be sold.

Since June, 1943, a full-time clerk has been employed, with the Dane county unit of the Association for the Disabled and the state rehabilitation department sharing the expense of the overhead and the clerk's salary. Since then sales have risen 500 per cent, and in December, 1943, totalled $946.63. Forty four homebound persons, ranging from 16 to 81 years of age, are engaged in the project. Earnings run from a few dollars a month per person up to $107 earned by one worker in December.

The Easter Seal sale, proceeds from which help make the project and other help for the crippled possible, ends Easter Sunday, Apr. 9.

Reed Attacks Censorship Unit

Demands Inquiry Into Kellems Letters

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Sen. Clyde M. Reed (R.—Kas.) charged Friday that the office of censorship has "loosely and slovenly handled" copies of censorship mail deemed possibly seditious or dangerous. He demanded an investigation to determine how excerpts of letters written by Vivian Kellems came into the hands of a newspaper columnist and a congressman.

He assailed the so-called "intercepts" system by which all or parts of suspected letters mailed to points outside the United States are copied and circulated to any government agencies concerned. Reed said their improper handling "is the responsibility" of Censorship Director Byron Price and his organization.

Reed demanded that the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) ascertain whether there is any basis for charges of sedition voiced against Miss Kellems, Connecticut business woman, by Columnist Drew Pearson and Rep. John M. Coffee (D.—Wash.)

Declaring he did not believe the FBI would find anything to substantiate the charges, Reed also called on the senate postoffice committee to ascertain how Pearson and Coffee obtained copies of letters allegedly written by Miss Kellems to Count Frederick Karl von Zedlitz, German steel trust agent in Buenos Aires, on which the sedition charges were based.

Reed told a press conference he did not believe the postoffice department had interfered with the letters.

"Frankly," he said, "I think the trouble will be found in Mr. Price's domain."

Price said, "I shall be glad to cooperate in any investigation that the senate committee wants to make."

Coffee, in a recent speech on the house floor, read excerpts from what he said were letters written by Miss Kellems to Von Zedlitz.

A Little Saturday Talk: Where Do Meteors Come From?

From Mrs. William West comes a letter which speaks about meteor cinders, or "meteorites". She writes:

"I have been interested in your stories about meteorites. We have some at our museum in Peru, Indiana, and children take a great interest in them and are curious to know where they come from. We would appreciate whatever information you give about their source."

That letter brings up a question which has been something of a puzzle, though we have a better answer today than people did a century ago.

Meteors come from outer space, and many of them, if not all, are believed to be parts of broken comets.

One thing which added to our knowledge was the breakup of Biela's comet. This famous comet used to make trips around the sun once in six and three-fourths years. In 1846 it came back as usual, but soon after being seen it broke into two parts. Late in 1852 the two parts returned to sight, but then they went away and never have been seen since.

The most interesting part of the rest of the story about Biela's comet is this: At certain times, when this comet would be due in the neighborhood of the earth, there have been meteor showers. It is believed that these meteor showers are the result of the earth bumping into, or being struck by broken parts of Biela's comet!

That is not the only example of lost comets seeming to cause meteor showers. The Perseids, or "August meteors," are known to travel over a pathway like that of Tuttle's comet, which was brightly seen in 1862.

On Feb. 9, 1913, some persons in eastern Canada saw a "procession of meteors" moving to the southeast. There were hundreds of bright meteors, in groups of from three to 40, and they were reported as being watched from vessels on the Atlantic. It appears that they fell into the ocean that night, at points near Bermuda.

Speaking of that event, H. Spencer Jones, British Astronomer Royal, says:

"This stream of meteors was possibly the final display of some wornout comet."

It is likely that some meteor cinders have come from far outside our solar system. Even then they may be parts of broken comets.
