Police Drive on Delinquent Parking Violators

Parking violators who have escaped court review during the past several months, because of changes of personnel in the police traffic bureau, are now being rounded up in a cleanup campaign, Traffic Capt. J. Homer Elder explained today.

Elder said that the majority of persons with five or more violations already have been checked and that those that remain are mainly single violations.

The police department is giving violators the opportunity to pay for the delinquent tickets without warrant costs if they do it when the officers call, he said. Some of the violators who paid during the past two days include:

May W. Briggs, $6 forfeited; Ken Schmitt, $5 forfeited; Floyd Wheeler, $6 forfeited; Lloyd Kohl, $5 forfeited; Dorothy Davies, fined $5; M. K. Uphoff, $20 forfeited; Gerda Grant, $19 forfeited; Joseph Rothschild, $15 forfeited; Henry L. Casserly, $7 forfeited; Ray Kyser, $5 forfeited.

Lalley Gets Deferred Sentence

Daniel T. Lalley, 35, of 323 W. Dayton st., proprietor of the Bullseye Amusements, 422 State st., was given a deferred sentence in superior court Wednesday on a violation of the city fireworks ordinance charge. Lally, who pleaded guilty to selling explosive caps for toy pistols, was instructed by Judge Roy H. Proctor to have the city clerk explain what does and what does not constitute "fireworks" under the present ordinance.

Orpheum

FEATURE: I'll Be Seeing You.
TYPE: Love story; Class: neurotic.
CAST: Mary, Ginger Rogers; Zack, Joseph Cotton; Barbara, Shirley Temple; Aunt Sarah, Spring Byington.
REVIEWER: Helen Matheson.
STORY: A psychoneurotic soldier on Christmas furlough and a girl granted a 10-day holiday parole from a penitentiary fall in love. He confesses his past. She doesn't. But at the last minute—oh, you guessed it?—he finds out.
HIGH POINTS: Ginger's looks . . . Cotton's acting . . . the $60 dress that "sells" for $19 . . . the homey personalities of the uncle and aunt.
LOW POINTS: The holes in the plot (what "holiday paroles," please, and what army psychiatrist would turn an orphaned, neurotic soldier loose at Christmastime to frolic out in the world and be happy?) . . . the morbid, unhealthy emphasis on the soldier's condition . . . the designer who decided it would be cute to dress Shirley Temple as unbecomingly as possible and Ginger as an ingenue (after all, she wasn't a criminal really; she'd just killed a man) . . . the sugary philosophy and stagey "naturalness" of the Marshalls' family life.
VERDICT: Disappointing.
ALSO: A cartoon-amusing; a popular science short-clever; and a newsreel with some of the most war poignant scenes ever filmed.

John H. Bjoin Leaves $60,000

John H. Bjoin, Jr., Stoughton insurance man who died Apr. 20, left a near $60,000 estate to his widow, Helen M., county court records revealed Tuesday.

The estate contains $33,250 personal property, $26,000 real estate, which yields $1,000 annual rents and profits, and "unknown" liabilities, records showed.

Mr. Bjoin willed that upon the death of his widow, the estate is to be divided equally between their two children, Ann Elizabeth, 7, and John H., III, 3. His will stipulated that Mrs. Bjoin should spend $1,000 of the estate for medical aid to other children whom she considered needy.

Globe Gives Best Idea of Relative Size of Continents

While looking at war maps, many a newspaper reader has been taken back to his childhood days in school. Every school pupil studies geography before he finishes elementary school.

Flat maps may give a good idea about the shape of a country, its mountains, rivers and chief cities, but a flat map of the "whole world" is sure to have something wrong about it. The earth has the shape of an orange, and map makers have been puzzled as to how to show all the continents on a flat surface.

The most widely-used world map goes back to a man who lived four centuries ago. His name was Gerhard Kremer, and he was born in Flanders 20 years after Columbus made his first Atlantic voyage.

Kremer started to work on maps when he was a youth in his late teens. At length he produced a map "on Mercator's projection." You may wonder who Mercator "Geradus Mercator," was used on his maps as "the Latin form of Gerhard Kremer." Today he is best known under the name of Mercator.

The world map "on Mercator's projection" has lines of longitude at right angles to those of latitude. It has been improved with passing time, but goes back to the main idea of Mercator.

One great trouble with the Mercator world map is the fact that some parts of the earth are made to look too large, others too small. Greenland, for example, is made to look about the same size as South America. The truth is that South America has eight times as much land as Greenland.

The best world map is one on a globe. Such a map shows the continents in their true size compared to one another.

Sad to say, the average globe is of rather small size. More could be learned from a large globe.

I know of one school where a globe eight feet in diameter was made as a class project. The school carpenter prepared a wooden framework and, guided by their teacher, the pupils covered it with maps of continents, islands and oceans.
