SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. Scott

Dutch Maid Ice Cream Stores

Will Open at 10 a. m. and Close at 10 p. m.

We believe that shortening the store hours is better than closing two days each week. Shortage of materials forces us to do this. We have plenty of help but not enough ice cream. We will of course be closed Tuesdays as in the past.

Disabled Children to Enjoy Camp Outing

Two busy weeks of vacation that will take in the Fourth of July holiday, are in store for 13 Madison boys and girls who left Sunday for Camp Wawbeek, state camp for disabled at Wisconsin Dells.

The group included Dorothy Caldwell, Jean Marie Chryst, Wayne Droster, Robert Goodman, Robert Haack, Thomas Halverson, Janice Johnson, Branford Kerns, Beverly McGraw, Bruce Mueller, Karl Peterson, Robert Stelter, Larry Swiggum. They will return to Madison, Sunday, July 8.

The young people rode to camp in the cars of Dr. Luther Holmgren, C. W. Sharratt, James D. Felker, who brought back with them children who had been to Wawbeek for the previous two weeks.

Tired Clown Saved Acrobat from Making Slide on Bad Rope

When we watch acrobats at work, we may have little idea of the long, hard training they have gone through. For a few minutes they put on their "acts," then leave the stage or circus ring. In those few minutes we see them perform stunts which they have practised for weeks or months, perhaps even for years.

We see a man stand on a wire, turn a somersault, and land safely on the wire. He may do this backward or forward, and may even go through a hoop while he is in the air. For most of us, it would be hard just to stand on the wire for two seconds.

At another moment a young woman in tights steps on a ball about two feet in diameter. Only one of her feet touches the ball. That may not seem so hard, but the ball, itself, is balanced on the crossbar of a trapeze! If you think that is easy to do, you might try it, but I advise you to have your trapeze bar close to the ground. It also would be well to have plenty of hay or straw below.

Acrobats and jugglers have been amusing the public for thousands of years. The Romans used to watch them perform on the stages of their open-air theaters. Ancient pictures show that Egyptian women, as well as men, served as jugglers.

It is likely that modern acrobats are more skillful than those of ancient times. Acrobats tend to gain skill with the passing of time. Children learn from their parents, and the art is likely to gain as the centuries go by.

There is some danger in the work of acrobats. From time to time they may fall, breaking a leg or arm or, once in a great while, dashing to their death.

A clown once saved an acrobat from harm and the way it happened seems very strange. The acrobat was to perform without a net, and was to slide down a rope from a high point. He tested the rope quickly, and made ready to start his act. Just at that moment the clown felt a bit tired, and leaned heavily against the rope, which had one end fastened to a stake in the ground. The weight of the clown broke the rope. So, by a hair's breadth, the acrobat was saved from trusting his life to a rope which was not fit for use.
