Mormons Climax Centenary Fete

SALT LAKE CITY — (U.P.) — One year ago, 24 mounted "pony express riders" were poised at one and one-half mile intervals along 36 miles of a mountainous, brush-strewn trail extending northeastward from Salt Lake City.

The day was July 24, 99 years from the day Brigham Young viewed Great Salt Lake valley for the first time and told his band of religious refugees, "This is the Place."

Riding hard, the modern pony express relay arrived in East Salt Lake City at the anniversary moment when the Mormon pioneers heard their leader describe the desert valley as the "Zion" of the Mormon religion.

This week, again on July 24, Utahns and thousands of tourist-visitors will note the climax of an eight-year program of planning involving millions of dollars.

The scene again will be at the emigration canyon knoll which affords an impressive view of the tree-shaded valley the Mormons have fostered out of a sand and sagebrush-strewn desert.

Utah began plans for its centennial observances in 1939. The celebration now reaches its height with festivities dedicating the Henefer-Salt Lake road and state park and the heroic, 12-foot bronze statues of Brigham Young and his counsellors, placed on a huge pillar of Utah marble overlooking the prosperous metropolis.

Two City Managers Are Not Candidates

Two more city managers whom the Madison council "sought out" for the job here told Council Pres. William Sachtjen Tuesday that they are not candidates.

George Benn, Pontiac, Mich., and C. F. Sharpe, St. Petersburg, Fla., both were "pleased" to be considered but both cited obligations to their present cities.

Farm Variety Hen Adopts a Brood

MILWAUKEE —(U.P.) — A common farm variety hen was put in a seat of honor today at the Washington Park zoo.

She left her modest hen-coop for the first time Tuesday to accompany seven baby peacocks to the zoo. The hen had hatched the eggs which one of the zoo's birds had laid in her coop.

Zoo officials didn't think she should be separated from her adopted brood.
