Hole in Sack Wrecks Perfect Fishing Day

OLYMPIA, Wash. — (U.P.) — Ernest Suko, an Olympia school superintendent, stoutly defends a fish story to end fish stories. It involves a hole in an onion sack.

Suko and a friend caught 11 gleaming trout ranging to 22 inches in nearby Clear lake while other fishermen caught nothing. One by one they placed the beauties in the sack tied to the stern of their boat to keep the fish alive and fresh in the water. When quitting time came, they hoisted in the sack.

No fish.

Check Artist, Wanted in Six States, Captured

BRAINERD, Minn. — (U.P.) — Robert Strecker, 31, Watertown, S. D., whose record of rubber-check passing and slippery escapes stretches through six midwestern states, was in federal hands today.

U. S. marshals were to take him to Sioux City, Ia., where a federal indictment charges him with passing several hundred dollars in bogus checks. The FBI has had a warrant for him for a year.

Strecker was captured Friday. Local authorities wanted him on charges of attempting to assault a young girl. After a four-hour search, a patrolman sighted him and chased him through the residential districts. The patrolman, Louis Rofidal, finally caught him and clubbed him into submission.

Strecker last escaped in April from a South Dakota sheriff who was taking him to Montana to face forgery charges. Earlier he had escaped from a Watertown jail and had been recaptured.

In South Dakota alone, authorities said he had passed several thousand dollars worth of bad checks, but all were not listed by federal authorities.

Home Chores Appeal to Schoolboys Also

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — (U.P.) — Mrs. Hettie Floyd Powers, junior high school home economics teacher, was surprised and somewhat skeptical when six boys signed up for her classes.

It was the first time boys had appeared in home economics courses here.

It didn't take long to find out that they meant business. "We have to do this at home anyway," they said, "so we might as well be getting credit for it."

Mrs. Powers said all six of the youngsters, who ranged between 12 and 13, preferred cooking to sewing, but that they did well in both subjects.

New Political League Asked

AFL Executive Group Breaks Union Policy

SAN FRANCISCO—(U.P.) —The American Federation of Labor (AFL) executive council this weekend recommended establishment of "LEPL" labor's education and political league, the AFL's own counterpart of the Congress of Industrial Organization's (CIO) political action committee.

In a sharp break from the AFL's traditionally conservative political policy, the council recommended LEPL be set up to fight for election of labor candidates to political office and to specifically defeat anti-labor members of the 80th congress.

Prepare Voting Records

It authorized LEPL to begin immediate preparation of the voting records of the members of congress and all candidates for political office, designating those it considered worthy of AFL support.

CIO-PAC already has marked 368 members of the 80th congress for defeat in the 1948 polls for supporting the Taft-Hartley act and failure to enact social legislation favored by the unions.

The council said that the "tragic failure of the 80th congress to serve the people . . . makes imperative the need for sound political education and effective political action by organized labor."

"In order to serve most effectively the interests of the workers of the nation and to meet adequately the challenge presented by predatory and vested interests, we recommend that the 66th annual convention of the AFL authorize and direct the executive council to arrange for the immediate establishment of "labor's educational and political league" to further the economic and political policies of the AFL," the council said in a report to be presented to the convention Monday.

Tell Workers AFL Policies

The council listed these tasks for the league:

ONE. Disseminate information to workers on AFL economic and political policies.

TWO. Disseminate information about candidates for nomination or election to federal office "with particular reference to their attitude toward AFL political and economic policies."

THREE. Take such other actions in furtherance of its objectives.

FOUR. Raise funds to carry out its purposes and employ such staff as needed.

The council proposed calling a national conference of the presidents of the 105 AFL unions to get the league functioning.

"I like people," she said. "Now that my daughter is married and gone from home, I need something to occupy my mind. That's why I went into this business."

Four-Power Peace Commission Signs Report

VIENNA, Austria — (U.P.) — The four-power Austrian peace treaty commission formally concluded its work Saturday after five months in session by signing a joint report to the council of foreign ministers citing 15 issues on which Russia and the three western powers disagreed.

An American spokesman for the commission said it had at least produced "concrete facts" and "will undoubtedly speed consideration of problems by the foreign ministers at their forthcoming meeting in London on Nov. 25."

Petkov Execution Aided by U.S., Britain, Charge

SOFIA, Bulgaria—(U.P.) — Premier Georgi Dimitrov said Saturday that "rude attempts" at intervention by Britain and the United States had made it impossible for him to commute the death sentence of Nikola Petkov, executed opposition leader.

In an interview, the head of the Communist-dominated Fatherland front government said interventions by British and American representatives here infringed on "sovereign Bulgarian justice" and had "a big share of the responsibility for the fate of Petkov himself."
