Army Maneuvers Balk Ever-Loving Frauleins

GRAFFENWOHR, Germany — (U.P.) — The complicated American army maneuvers near this town are being matched by the maneuvers of the German girl friends of many of the GI's.

Every subterfuge is being used by the girls, who flocked to this area when their boy friends went on spring maneuvers. So far, the army has managed to keep the minds of the soldiers strictly on mimic warfare.

It was done by closing off the maneuver area to civilians and declaring all towns in the neighborhood off-limits to the troops.

Army wives are disgruntled also. They hear the maneuvers may run well into the summer. Recently, the army arranged weekend billets for the wives so they could see their husbands when they were not out pretending to fight a war.

Red Skelton Ordered to Take Rest

By EDITH GWYNN

HOLLYWOOD — Red Skelton has been virtually knocking himself out with movies, radio, and the countless benefits he plays—and now the grind has caught up with him. His doctors have ordered a four-month rest because of a nervous ailment brought on by overwork. And "Neptune's Daughter," which Red was soon to have started with Esther Williams, has been postponed until fall . . . Loved his dialog on the air the other night when the announcer asked him about his new baby. "Yep," said Red, "the new baby has red hair. I'm scared we'll soon be known as the family with the subversive heads."

Jane Greer would have to have quadruplets to use all the gifts she received at that baby shower Anita Louise gave for her.

John Sutton was under contract at 20th-Fox for years and lost in the shuffle. Now that he's no longer tied there, he's been brought back for the best role he's ever had in "The Fan".

The off-stage and back-stage feuding of Faye Emerson Roosevelt and Louis Calhern (both appearing in "The Play's the Thing") is the tawk of N'Yawk.

While Joan Crawford was in Slapsie Maxie's the other night for Lena Horne's opening, a waiter found what he thought was a blazing hunk of costume jewelry under one of the tables. He put it in his pocket and forgot about it until next morning when he read in the papers about Joan's lost $50,000 brooch. Yep—you guessed it. What he thought was junk was her fabulous pin—and you can bet he'll get a huge reward for returning it to her promptly.

CRAWFORD

Cornel Wilde couldn't get his home studio, 20th-Fox, to buy that story of Robert Browning's life which he had his heart set on doing, but he'll get a nice change of pace in the new picture in which he's set to star when he finishes "Roadhouse" with Ida Lupino. It's a mystery warn called "Cloak of Innocence"—and all we know about the story so far is that it concerns a man who has a lot of battles with his conscience.

A long wire from Ann Sheridan says she rejected "Flamingo Road" because it was not a story acceptable for her. Unless Warners presents the type of scripts her contract calls for, she won't make a picture this year. Annie is one Warner player who can't be suspended. She has the kind of a contract that is any star's dream.

Now that the Jack Carson show is going off the air, Eve Arden and her agent are lining up a show of her own for fall.

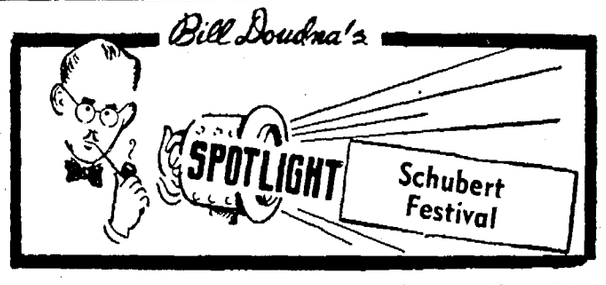
Sonny Tufts and Dennis O'Keefe are huddling about a joint picture deal. Hey! You oughta hear those "Hubert Updyke" routines that O'Keefe and Lee Bowman have been doing for their own amazement around the house—and at parties. Sometimes they use original Jim Backus radio material—sometimes their own ad libs—and very, very funny they are. Connie Moore isn't bad at it either. Everybody wants to get in the act as Hubert.

O'KEEFE

How could Gen. MacArthur throw his hat in the presidential ring? With all that brass on it, it must have been towed in!

A bunch of movie people who fly (in airplanes, that is) will join a breakfast flight that Frances Langford and Jon Hall have arranged to the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas June 13. Among them are Dick Powell, Jimmy Stewart, Bob Taylor, Veronica Lake, Brian Aherne.

Some of the Hollywood babes should stop trying to get a husband, and concentrate on the single men.



With two works which reemphasized the scope of Franz Schubert's genius and his particular gift for glorious melody, the University of Wisconsin's Schubert festival ended Sunday night. The concert, eighth in the season-long series, consisted of the "Octet in F Major" and the "Serenade for Women's Voices and Solo."

One would go far to find a finer group to perform the octet than that which gathered on the music hall stage. It consisted of William Willett, clarinet; Gunther Schuller, horn; Richard Church, bassoon; Ralph Hancock, contrabass, and the members of the Pro Arte quartet — Rudolf Kolisch and Albert Rahier, violins; Bernard Milofsky, viola, and Ernst Friedlander, cello.

As an ensemble, they were superb. The octet is a work of never-ending melody, leaving the listener with the feeling that the tunes overflow the six movements; complete, it still gives the impression that Schubert would have liked to pack even more into it. And the musicians met every call of the score with virtuoso performances.

Their sensitivity to the composer's intent made the group a true ensemble; yet one must mention the clarity and charm of Schuller's horn playing, particularly in the second movement; the incisiveness of Hancock's work in the finale, and the peculiarly rich pairing of Schuller's horn and Church's bassoon.

The program ended with the "Serenade" by the University Women's chorus, with Helene Stratman-Thomas as soloist and Kolisch at the piano. This was a brief flight of wholly lovely melody. Miss Thomas sang the solo passages with quiet simplicity and the chorus (of which she is director) replied in the same vein. Kolisch's accompaniment was easy and in exactly the right mood.

RURAL ART: Wisconsin's ninth Rural Art show has gone on display in the Memorial Union galleries with about 100 examples of work by the state's artists chosen from 1,500 shown earlier in regional exhibits.

Five of the pictures have been recommended for purchase by a University of Wisconsin committee. Two will go to farm magazines, but will return to the university college of agriculture after a year. The others will be bought with money from the John Steuart Curry memorial fund.

The paintings are "Kickapoo Dirt Farmers," by Virginia DeGaynor, Barnum; "Morning Glory," by Lois Ireland, Waunakee; "A Memory," by Walter Marsden, Edgerton; "Sugar Bush," by Ida Overzet, Wisconsin Rapids, and "The Picture of Life," by Walter Thorp, Baraboo.

Marsden is believed to be the oldest artist ever entering the show; he is 79. Miss Ireland is a freshman at the University of Wisconsin. Thorp is a farmer, and the other painters are farm wives.

The show will close June 29.
