Emergency Plan on Communications

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19. (AP) Defense officials are making inspection visits to Camp Ritchie in connection with the projected building at that western Maryland site of an alternate communications center for use if aerial attack knocks out the Pentagon, it was learned today.

In answer to a reporter's question, a defense spokesman said such inspections are being made "from time to time," as are routine checks on all military construction projects.

The Defense Department disclosed the plan to establish what it described as a "supplemental communications installation" in a brief announcement on July 26.

"We have examined appellants' petition for a rehearing and find nothing which has not previously been answered by the government's brief and resolved by the opinion of the court," the answer said.

It was filed by the U. S. attorney in the Second U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which must decide whether to grant the rehearing or not.

Film to Be Seen in Navy Chapel

The film, "Beyond Our Own," will be shown tomorrow afternoon in the Navy Family Chapel, 451 W. Ocean Blvd. A major production of the Protestant Film Commission, the theme of the picture is the clash between materialism and Christianity, developed in the story of two brothers who seek different paths in life.
