FEATURE: Bedtime for Bonzo

TYPE: Comedy

CAST: Bonzo, the chimp as himself; Prof. Peter Boyle, Ronald Reagan; Jane Linden, Diana Lynn.

REVIEWER: Wally Wikoff

STORY: Prof. Boyle, son of a notorious con man, tries to prove that even an ape, given good environment, can distinguish between right and wrong. He hires a housekeeper (Jane Linden) to mother the chimp. Bonzo proves to be quite the adopted child.

HIGH POINTS: Don't know what the actors went through behind the scenes, but they worked smoothly with their scene-stealing partner, the chimp . . . Bonzo makes parents in the audience wonder whether they should have raised a chimp instead of their own children . . . appealing plot.

LOW POINTS: "The other woman" angle could have been left out entirely . . . If Reagan would gulp less and act more naturally, he would be much better.

VERDICT: Clever, heart-warming and especially good for youngsters.

ALSO: "Under the Gun" with Richard Conte and Audrey Totter, a "bang, bang" prison break type. Mediocre.

Bill Doudna's

Spotlight

"Dinner at Eight," which the Madison Theater Guild is presenting as its last bill of the 1950-51 season, is a tricky play, complicated in structure but simple in theme and equipped with a finish somewhat like that of "The Lady or the Tiger."

Consequently, it would be a shame to tell too much about it, for that would spoil things for those who will see the Kaufman-Ferber work at 8 tonight in West high school and at 8 p.m. Saturday in East high. The Guild production, ably staged by Robert Merriman, opened Thursday night at West.

Off to a slow start, partly because the actors hadn't solved acoustical problems, the play mounted steadily in interest and pace.

Its successful production was due more to the players' ability to master the many characterizations than to the play itself; without clean delineations, the audience might have foundered in the sea of faces.

It was the story of what happened when Millicent Jordan planned an elaborate dinner in honor of visiting nobility — how she managed to invite, as her guests, such an assortment as a philandering physician and his wife, along with his current amour and her suspicious husband, who in turn was pulling a fast one on Mr. Jordan; a retired actress who held the clue to his plot in her hands and who upset a servants' romance; a faded matinee idol secretly loved by Mrs. Jordan's daughter.

Part of the complication resolved itself; the rest—well, that would be telling.

Outstanding in the long cast were Margot Herriott, as the hostess, who thought nothing could be worse than a spoiled aspic; Mildred Wirka, as her outspoken but understanding poor-relation sister; Marjorie Schaffer, as the actress; Virginia Rauch, and Paul Hunter, as the raucous wife and the loud-mouthed financial trickster, and William Harley, as the actor.

Each had a big scene, and all played them to the hilt. Harley's self-staged exit was particularly fine.

In lesser roles, good pictures were drawn by Ann Bjork, as a maid; Baird Tenney, as a butler; John Sammis, as the actor's agent, and Warren Enters, as a hotel manager.

Sets were simple but highly effective.

Slow spots probably will be pepped up for the last two performances.

FILM NEWS: News from The State Journal's Hollywood correspondent . . .

Hollywood's not exactly in tears at the story that Rex Harrison and Lilli Palmer are house-shopping in Italy and will move there after they wind up "Bell, Book, and Candle" in New York.

As soon as Uncle Sam gives the word that there will be enough service men in the southern California area to justify a revival of the Hollywood Canteen, the old Florentine Gardens will be opened as an entertainment rendezvous for the GIs—operated as during World War II by Bette Davis and workers for the Hollywood Canteen foundation.

Cecil B. DeMille never has failed to break box office records with his Biblical subjects, so with "Samson and Delilah" making such an impression on moviegoers, it's inevitable C. B. would look again to the Bible for a screen story. It will be "Queen of Queens," the story of Mary, mother of Jesus.

+ + +

DISCS OF THE DAY: "Songs of the Augvergne," recorded by Susan Reed (Columbia) . . . These warm songs from France, transcribed from Canteloube's settings by Sam Feldman, are sung in the Languedoc dialect, but that makes little difference even though you can't understand the words. There are love songs, a lullaby, dances, and ballads in the collection. The set, available in album or on an LP disc, also includes English, Irish, and American folk songs—such as "Sweet Betsy from Pike," "Next Market Day," "Molly Malone," "My Lagan Love," and others. A chamber group accompanies Miss Reed in the French songs; she plays her own zither accompaniment in the second group.

RECITAL: Oliver Endres, pianist-composer, and Marie Endres, violinist-conductor, will present a group of their pupils in a recital at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the Wisconsin School of Music. Both are on that school's faculty.

Pianists on the program will be Helen Cheo, Don Fritz, Patricia Grosse, Timothy Gorman, Daniel Jahn, Barbara Koch, Joan Kubecik, Joan McCaughey, Dolores Mittler, Phillip Noth, Connie Stolen and Roger Stolen.

Violinists will be Carol Bruley, Marvel Gasser, Margot Herman, Myrna Lewis and Martha Stone.

Digby Watrous will play viola. Dolores Mittler will be accompanist.
