'MINISTER' SEIZED IN BANK ROBBERY

BOSTON, Aug. 5—(AP) A man who described himself as a minister of a self-organized church was arrested today less than a half hour after he allegedly held up the cashier of the Codman Square Cooperative bank in Dorchester and fled with $255.

The man, booked as the Rev. Freeman Wilson Vaara, 39, pastor of the Church of the Wayside Army was charged with armed robbery. He was seized by police as he entered his church, where he also makes his home. Police quoted him as saying he organized the church and ordained himself minister.

Lt. Walter Haggerty said they found he bank cash in the lining of a coat in the man's automobile. Under the coat, they said, were three toy guns, a rifle, a cowboy six-shooter and an automatic pistol.

In a suit pocket they found a note which read: "God forgive me, I'm about to commit a crime."

The note, Haggerty said, was instrumental in making Vaara admit the holdup. At first he told police he was returning from a church call, but when confronted with the note, police quoted him as saying, "I did it."

Miss Clara Reed of Braintree, the bank cashier, told police Vaara had visited the bank twice before the holdup. On both occasions, she said, he asked for coin wrappers.

When he reappeared for the third time, Miss Reed said, he held a gun and said: "I want $2,000 and want it quick. Put in this envelope."

The cashier said she explained she did not have that much cash, but threatened by the gun, she removed some money from the till and the man grabbed it and fled.

As Vaara ran to an automobile, Mrs. Sally McLeod, daughter of a bank director, who was just about to enter the bank, heard Miss Reed scream and she jotted down the registration number and relayed it to police.

Police said Vaara is married and the father of a 7-year-old boy. He was held for appearance in Dorchester District court tomorrow.

ABSOLVED IN FATALITY

Coroner Edgar W. Kreutzman yesterday cleared a Boston autoist of criminal blame for a Merritt parkway accident in which a Newark, N. J., man was killed June 12.

Willie Williams, 33, of 50 Hillside place, Newark, was driving easterly on the parkway about 400 feet west of Bayberry lane, Westport, about 3:30 a. m. when his car developed motor trouble, according to the coroner's finding.

Mr. Williams stopped his auto with the left wheels on the paved portion of the parkway and the right wheels on the grassy esplanade, the coroner says, and after opening the hood stepped back into the path of an east-bound car driven by James C. McWilliams, of 32 Worcester square, Boston.
