7 THEOLOGY UNITS GET BIG GRANTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—(AP) The Sealantic fund, one of the philanthropic funds founded by John D. Rockefeller Jr., today granted $10,375,000 to six interdenominational theological schools and the American Association of Theological Schools.

The grants, some of which required the schools to raise matching funds, went to:

Vanderbilt University School of Religion, Nashville, Tenn.—$2,800,000 on condition that the university raise or supply from its own funds one million dollars for new buildings.

Federated Theological Faculty of the University of Chicago—$1,750,000, of which $1,250,000 was an outright gift and $500,000 payable on a basis of $1 for every $4 raised from other sources.

Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Calif; Union Theological Seminary, New York city, and Yale University Divinity school—$1,500,000 each, one million dollars of which is an outright gift and $500,000 on a $1 for $1 matching basis

Harvard University Divinity school—$500,000 as an outright gift. Rockefeller personally gave the school one million dollars in 1954.

The American Association of Theological Schools—$725,000 payable over a 10-year period.

The fund said it sought to benefit theological education generally and to encourage others to contribute. It said it selected the interdenominational schools, representing various sections of the country, because they were less likely to receive significant contributions from denominational bodies which "quite understandably" give most of their support to their own schools.
