Public Slow to Grasp Significance of Present Situation and Trend in Control of Broadcast

"TIMES" COMIC STRIPS OF THE AIR, KHJ, 8 A.M.

World-wide News, 10 a.m.

BY JOHN S. DAGGETT

Today I would like to discuss the crisis in radio. Weekly articles by the writer over a period of years have endeavored to trace its development, always in the hope that the public might be awakened to the importance of radio.

This situation must be grasped. A day will come when radio undoubtedly will prove of major importance in the solving of some world crisis. We dislike to think of another World War, cataclysms or other forms of upheaval, but these possibilities must be considered. Nations still are squandering billions of dollars in armaments, while the power of radio which may prove the world's greatest armament is being allowed to drift out of control of nations and the public.

"A lone pen can do little to encourage a reaction, deeper thought and ultimate control of this great radio channel of endeavor. Yet the response today shows conclusively that the public is beginning to think about radio and its adaptation. Perhaps the real awakening will not come until a crisis is reached."

CHURCH BROADCAST

It is a significant fact that five years ago the Catholic Church again and again flatly refused to utilize radio. Today the voice of that church has rung around the world and indications are that the broadcast medium is to be used more and more as time goes on.

Other religious organizations and educational endeavors are openly decrying the fact that the tightening up of permits under dominant control is denying to them their share of time on the air. The next session of Congress undoubtedly will be called on to answer these and other protests concerning the radio situation. The response of Congress will be in proportion to the definite interest shown by the public. Lethargy on the part of the body politic inevitably means victory for the powers in control.

In writing these articles, I am not opposing the intentions of the so-called radio trust, realizing that anyone probably would do the same thing under similar circumstances. The thoughts are expressed in the hope that the ideal in radio may be attained, free and untrammelled by selfish motive or dominant commercialism. Perhaps it is only butting one's head against a stone wall, but it should be realized that the little dial which you turn on your receiving set at home may be made more than merely a mechanical attachment.

NEED FOR CHANGE

Response in time of need to the appeal of the Red Cross flashes in American history as a true humanitarian achievement. The definite need brought the awakening and created the reaction of loosened purse strings. The same may be duplicated in radio upon the advent of a crisis. But until such a contingency arises, concessions are to become few and far between unless monetary return is guaranteed as the impelling motive. International features in radio eventually will become purely contract agreements, the cost of broadcast to be paid either by the point of origin or by the public at place of reception.

A preliminary solution or at least a step in the right direction would be a reallocation of wave lengths giving to educational broadcast a fair amount of time on the air. This applies also to religious endeavor. Careful observation of radio on the part of the writer justifies the statement that religion is not dead in the world and that through radio a dramatic turning along religious lines will be brought about. The public has been invited to gormandize on music, a stipulated background of practically all sponsored programs. The public wants something more substantial more soul-satisfying.
