Make Yourself a Job

WITH ED BISHOP
 The Idea Hunter

When the economic wave washed one San Francisco man out of a position, he fell back on his hobby to furnish him a living. When in high school he made a special study of pen-lettering, and became proficient through constant practice, lettering poems, mottoes, etc., as gifts to friends. Realizing that there were thousands of diplomas awarded every year to graduates of schools of every description, and that somebody had to letter them, he contacted various schools in his district, and the excellence of his work, as shown by samples, resulted in the building of a worth-while steady business.

Same simple new idea, properly broadcast, may put 1000 men back to work. If you know any idea, actually working, help spread the news by sending full details to Ed Bishop, care of this newspaper.
