"TONIC for tired minds

"I like 'Dan Harding's Wife,'" writes one listener. "The story seems like a tonic for tired minds. A short, cheerful visit to which I look forward each day. Donna is delightful, bubbling over with youth and gaiety, full of mischief, yet ever thoughtful of her mother. Dean is a manly chap—the type I want my son to be. And Rhoda—what a mother! Old-fashioned ideals coupled with modern understanding."

understanding."
You, too, will be fascinated by this story of a woman who faces every mother's problems alone. It is truly one of the top-flight developments in radio entertainment. Listen every day.

our chances of life are much greater if you head off the road into the ditch or hit an obstruction, than they are if your two-ton automobile disputes the right-of-way with the 800-ton locomotive.

And if your car should stall on the tracks, leap out on the side from which the train is approaching, so you'll not be struck and killed by flying wreckage of your auto-

Town, city and county officials also have a grave responsibility in seeing that every crossing is properly sanded or cindered regularly during the icy season, the commission pointed out. None of the fatal state highways in the open country.

If the Earth Were Flat NEW YORK—(U.P.)—If the earth were flat, a 200-inch glass tele-scope reflector would permit a man in San Francisco to read a sign in ing, start slowing down far back of New York as clearly as the New the crossing, and never come to a Yorker reads it from across the street,, says Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.
