The state conservation commission today announced an order affecting Wisconsin's commercial fishing mdustry along Lake Michigan and Green Bay by setting up uniform regulations which it said were designed primarily toward protection of small fish.

The new order has received approval of Gov. La Follette and will become effective on official publication. Its regulations were said to be in line with those imposed by other Great Lakes states.

An original commission order including provisions similar to those announced today were protested vigorously by one group of Wisconsin fishermen. The governor granted a re-hearing on the order but the commission left its provisions unchanged and La Follette approved
