RUDY VALLEE "... I refused to become foolish"

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of radio articles written for Central Press and The State Journal by leading personalities of the ether. Even as a boy, when I used to carry water to circus elephants and operate a movie projector, I felt a longing to be a showman. At that time P. T. Barnum, B. F. Keith, and Flo Ziegfeld held an unchallenged reputation, and their deeds served as patterns for all the vaudeville promoters and circus barkers in the land. I don't know how those masters defined it, but I think that my conception of showmanship as the business of startling and amusing people is essentially the same as theirs; it is only in practice that settle that question.

A Barnum freak would have in the shuffle. Radio and the modern stage and movies have made the so-called gullible public discriminating, and it stands to reason that a modern showman must face this matter squarely and forget much of the past. The public demands extraordinary gifts, sharp wits, keen insight, cultured voices and perfect rhythm, and not mere specimens of blinding beauty or pitiful deformity.

My own ideas of showmanship are exemplified by my weekly radio program. They have won some success, although they are at odds with many traditional notions. Again and again critics have forecast my downfall because I refused to become estentatious or foolish, but it seemed to me that if you have a genuine it is certainly doomed. gift for entertaining, people will
