Farr, Baer Clash Tonight in Battle of the Blusterers By DAVIS J. WALSH International News Service Sports Editor NEW YORK, N. Y.—(INS)—All is in readiness for the battle of the blusterers, meaning Max Baer, the great American adenoid, and Tommy Farr, the blathering Britisher, at 15 rounds in Madison Square Garden tonight, a meeting that has come about practically through popular demand. Everybody wants to see both assassinated, with the result that upward of 12,000 ruffled and indignant citizens will view the event with mingled feelings. The best they'll be able to do is to be for the guy who's not on the ground: It will be Farr's first appearaimed a petulant kick at his own

Wisconsin's varsity crew coach, Ralph Hunn, went back to 1895 for a precedent enabling him to get an early start on the water. Madison lies between two lakes, Mendota and Monona, which are oined by the Yahara river-practically straight and nine-tenths of a mile long, which is open all winter. The ice does not go out of the Madison lakes until April-often mid-April. Back in 1895, Wisconsin oarsmen practiced on the Yahara until able to row on Lake Mendots but no coach since then had attempted this until Hunn delege, Topeka, plays Central State cided to try it. He held his river practice, Feb. 14. His three varsity crews have rowed there every day since, using a 47-foot 8-oared coxwain gig which is the identical boat in which the late Andrew M. O'Dea coached his Badger crews
