Amos 'n' Andy Celebrate Decade on Air March 19

Amos 'n' Andy will celebrate their 10th birthday on March 19. For 10 years the business affairs of the Fresh Air Taxi co., and of such other enterprises as the gullible Andy has become involved in, have been amusing American radio listeners, During that decade, Amos 'n' Andy have become such favorites that statisticans estimate more than 40,000,-000 listeners follow the fortunes of the black face comedians each week over the NBC-Red network.

March 19 will be an exciting day for Freeman F. Gosden (Amos) and Charles J. Correll (Andy). Gosden and Correll, who have been broadcasting from their special winter studio in Palm Springs, will return to the NBC Hollywood studies for their anniversary broadcast, and friends of the radio pioneers will join them in celebrating.

Gosden and Correll are real pioneers or radio. They spoke into a microphone for the first time in 1920, on an experimental station in New Orleans. Five years later, after varied experiences, including a season as singers on a Chicago station, they evolved Sam 'n' Henry, the forerunners of Amos 'n' Andy.

In 1928 the phenomenal run of the team of Amos 'n' Andy started. The characters were born in the minds of Correll and Gosden, named on the spur of the moment and introduced over WMAQ, Chicago, on March 19,

They came to NBC networks on August 19, 1929, and have been heard over NBC networks regularly since then, for many years from the NBC Chicago studios and more recently from Hollywood and Palm Springs. Tonight's aces, classified:

North-South did not use asking range at hearts. South was afraid to jump to four no trump, since this would automatically put him in a five contract.

West opened the five of clubs, a favorable lead for declarer. East med the king, and the ace won. · "lay at this point was to return the club, in the hone of establishing dummy's jack as an eventual trick. Declarer, however, thought he had other fish to fry. Probably on to guard himself against adverse the theory that he would have to ruffs. When he must cash certain ruff only one losing diamond in order to insure the contract, he decided to "play safe" by getting out at least one round of trumps. He, therefore, led low to dummy queen ? East case this is not clear the following ducked, and now, since another heart lead might invite the defenders to continue with a third round, declarer switched to diamonds. He led low to the ace and cashed the king; that is, he thought he was cashing it! East rudely interrupted with a rull, then laid down the ace and another heart, sweeping dumnly clear of trumps. Declarer found himself with a losing club and two losing diamonds, thus suffering a 200 point penalty.

It was more difficult to lose this contract than to make it. Even after declarer's failure to return a club at the second trick, the situation should have been well in hand. Even the unnecessary lead of a heart would not have been fatal if declarer had taken the precaution to lay down one high diamond honor from his own hand, then, on reaching dummy with the heart queen, to lead up to the other diamond honor. Against this, East would be helpless. If he ruffed, declarer would merely discard a losing diamond; if he didn't, the king would bids, hence South's four diamond bid be cashed and a low diamond led and was merely a strong rebid implying a ruffed. East could overruff and remild slam try and, at the same time, turn a trump but in that case de-keeping the bidding within game clarer would lose only one club the clarer would lose only one club. the heart ace, and one diamond.

A few minutes later, in the resence of two policemen who had handcuffed the prisoners, Terry explained the parts he and Kay had played in the case. "But," one of the officers de-manded, "what makes you think that Millis done it?" Taking a clipping from his pocket. Terry opened it to him. It was from the personal column of the Sun advertising section. It read:

"KAY H.-Meet me at the Blue Rock Club at 8 tonight to discuss the problem of T. -Terry "

"When Millis found out Miss Howard knew something about the murder, he was afraid she'd spill it and he'd be caught. So he lured her into the hands of a hired kidnaper by using an ad in the paper. you suspect him?" Terry smiled. "At first it looked like a sure thing that Stanton did it. But I remembered that Thorpe was shot in the back, below the heart and to the right from about six feet away. That meant that whoever shot him was probably right-handed and, unless he held the gun very low, was short. Well, after I'd met Stanton, I saw that he was very tall, and he blew his nose and held his gun in his left hand. It wasn't proof he didn't do it, but it could be enough to get him off in court."
