Modernization of Wisconsin's move. state government, which "has without any careful overhauling for over 80 years", has been achieved through reorganization activities of the past two months Gov. La Foliette declared to a statewide radio audience Tuesday night. In the first of his series of four need for reorganization, Gov La Follette stated: "For over 80 years the government of Wisconsin has gone with-out any careful overhauling. Year legislatures have added new duties and provided new powers. But it was often done in a hit or miss fashion. Bureau, departments, and commissions were established without much regard to the sound and efficient functioning of government as a whole. Work Is Completed

"A careful and paintaking ex-amination of your state government was begun in January," the governor said, followed by "week after week" of reorganization transfers with the result that "in a large part the work is now completed and we can now report to you what has been done." not try to put a round peg in a square hole," Gov. He cited accomplishments under eorganization, which recognizes the legislature as too large to function efficiently on details and permits the governor to go ahead with reorganization between legislative sessions The reorganization act, the governor said, refuting charges of 'dictatorial" methods was in keeping with "basic American principles" of government. "I would not refer to this subject (reorganization) now excepting to Join YMCA that the method we have used on reorganization of government may at Houston, Tex be a very important contribution as to a method we can use with many other problems which we face in our state and national life today." he said. The first thing to be done "was to carefully examine the responsibilities of each department-to take the round pegs out of the square holes and to put each activity where it naturally and properly belonged" contended the governor. He described transfer of the state's tuberculosis treatment and prevention activities from the board of control to the state board of health. Another Example Security regulation, a financial matter, had been transferred from a utility regulating body, the public service commission, and given to the banking commission because that department supervises financial operations. Consolidation of the state's inspection units into a single inspection service will produce "greater efficiency and greater economy" the governor forecast. The old system, with inspectors from various departments calling at the same place to perform various inspection duties was the "reason complaints about state inspectors community."

Combining of the supervision of the state nine teachers colleges, Stout Institute, the state mining school, the library school and 28 county normal schools under the board of normal school regents, other reorganization transfers, were the result of cooperation by consecutive radio talks, which educators desirous of a unified teachers training program, the governor maintained. Separation of executive and judicial functions was cited as another reorganization achievement. "In this important particular our state government in the past has had a serious weakness," the governor declared. In the past the approved by the reorganization committee under-terms of the 1937 reorganization act. a commission is abolition of the department of agricultures and markets three commissioners who were replaced by a seven man board to make policy and a director to carry on administration of the department. The reorganizayear over this long period tion act specifically provided for this change, which was not cited by the governor in his radio talk. The governor described the new administration cabinet, composed of directors of major departments and reviewed provisions of the reorganization act. Reorganization changes are subject under the act to legislative veto by majority vote within 10 days of con-Since the act was jammed through the 1937 session in a fashion attacked by administration critics as "dictatorial" there has been little outspoken criticism of Gov. La Follette's revamping "We have a common saying 'do of the state departments. But in probable anticipation of a campaign barrage against the act, the "Usually we apply that to governor declared: "We thus provided the authority to get the job done but we also provided adequate and comprehensive safeguards against any autocratic use of that power." Every change made had been made with "unanimous" approval of the reorganization committee of legislators and state officials, the governor said, and the "unanimous approval" of departments affected by the changes. Don Newton
