Insurance on '39 Wheat Paid Up

Practically all of the 228 winter wheat growers in 14 Wisconsin counties who applied for their 1939 harvest paid their premiums before the deadline date, reports Robert Schultz of the state agricultural conservation committee. Schultz estimates that approximately 1450 bushels of wheat are being set aside as premiums for the Wisconsin growers. This, it is said, insures the crop on 1617 acres, about 2 1/2 per cent of the Wisconsin winter wheat crop.

Who's Who Among Wisconsin Birds

The great blue heron is called Wisconsin's most state-like and picturesque bird, more than three feet tall, with its long neck and long legs, and a wing spread of five to six feet. It is of bluish gray color, mostly white on the throat and the breast and belly of the bird is black. In spring and summer it has two long, slender floating plumes from the back of the head. The birds have established rookeries where they return year after year to rear their families. These rookeries are usually in heavy forested areas. When the birds arrive in the spring they go directly to their rookeries and start preparation for nesting. They arrive soon after the middle of March.
