"Why didn't you let me for. I haven't any place to go and I can't find work." Work? How could Mrs.

Schmidt find work? She is 81 years old and weighs 91 pounds. Patrolman Rogers took her to police headquarters where she spent the night in the care of a matron. Saturday she appeared in court. "Anna Schmidt," called out the clerk, "Disorderly conduct."

Speciators leaned forward. A hush fell over the court-room as a bespectacled little old lady walked to the witness stand. Municipal Judge Oscar Caplan asked her to tell her story.

"I wanted to die," she said. "I had a happy home once. Now my husband is dead and so are my three sons. I had a nice little home, too, but when my husband died 16 years ago I had to mortgage

"Last month I lost my home. I lived in the house, but I could get no work."

Women spectators wept softly. Tears welled in the eyes of the judge, the clerk, and newspapermen as the little old lady continued her story.

Piece by piece she sold her furniture to buy food and fuel. Two days ago there was no

"I can send you to an old ladies' home," Judge Caplan suggested. "Oh, God, no," she pleaded. "For years I have be-longed to myself and I always will."

A hush fell over the courtroom. Before Judge Caplan could speak, a voice from a spectator's seat broke the silence:

"I'll take care of her! "I'll adopt her!"

Mrs. Charles Whitehurst, 52, stepped forward. She told the court that, like Mrs. Schmidt, she was an Austrian and a Roman Catholic. What's more, she said, she was planning a European trip next summer and would take Mrs. Schmidt to see her only living child, a daughter, in Hungary.

"God bless you," cried Mrs. Schmidt as Mrs. Whitehurst helped her from the stand and walked arm in arm with her out of the courtroom.
