Trocheset Took Rocky Road to National Crown

UNIVERSITY, La.—(U.P.)—Rene Trocheset never knew when he was whipped, so he became Louisiana State university's national intercollegiate heavyweight boxing champion.

The big 22-year-old senior from B'loix, Miss., was whipped by Nick Lee of Wisconsin in the national finals at Madison, Wis., to finish his collegiate boxing as the country's best after an erratic and torturous climb.

Trocheset was RENE TROCHESSET, born with a "never knew" fighting heart. No one expected him to beat Lee in the finals. Just a week before Lee had knocked out the big Mississippi in the same ring. But Trocheset never knew when he was whipped. Lee was just another fighter that night when he squared off for the national title.

That upset was the last in the series Trocheset started when he came to L. S. U. from Perkinson (Mississippi) Junior College in January, 1938. He finished fourth in the national intercollegiate tournament at Charlottesville, Va., last year although he had failed to win the Southeastern conference championship.

Coach Ed Khoury devoted much time to the awkward fighter from Mississippi. He taught him footwork and feinting.

Early this February, Southern Louisiana Institute's Bernie Davies knocked Trocheset out in 65 seconds in their match here. Two weeks later they met again at Lafayette. Fans expressed sympathy for Trocheset. His sympathy disappeared in three rounds. Trocheset won.

When Trocheset met Tennessee's Ed Molinski for the Southeastern Conference title a few weeks later even the most optimistic gave the big Mississippiian little chance to win. But Trocheset's victory was decisive.

Trocheset is content, for a while at least. Later he may enter professional ranks.

Bradley said that as yet New York and Detroit have not agreed to play under the lights, but he indicated that should the clubs refuse, the dates will be awarded to other clubs.

Stop, Go Lights May Direct Play in Hockey Loop

DETROIT — (U.P.) — Hockey games in the future would be played with the referee seated high above the ice calling fouls and off sides by switching on colored lights if Tommy Filmore's invention is accepted by the National League's board of governors at its May meeting in Boston.

Filmore contends that hockey fans have long declared that they can see plays from their arena seats better than officials on the ice. He would have the referee seated above the rink and to one side of center ice. A system of colored lights flashing through "portholes" along the boards would signal the teams what offense had been committed.

Filmore played hockey with the Detroit Red Wings, Boston, the New York Americans and with several minor league clubs. His plan has been endorsed by Jack Adams, Red Wings' manager, and by almost a 100 others officially connected with the game.

Fourteen glass-covered holes are placed along the boards at equal intervals flush with the board surface. In the referee's "cage" above the rink is a small switchboard by which he controls the color of the lights. One official remains on the ice to face the puck.

If an offside is seen by the referee, he flashes all the green lights, indicating play is to stop. Then all the lights are turned off except those at the ends of the 50 foot line where the offside was committed, indicating to the man faced off.

If a foul is committed, red on the ice where the puck is to be played is flashed to stop the play. Then the referee announces over a loudspeaker system what the foul is and which player is to go to the penalty box.

Filmore believes his system would soon eliminate all rough play.

Auburn Does Not Have Home Grid Tilts

AUBURN, Ala.—(U.P.)—Auburn's Footballmen, who play all their football games away from home, will meet 10 foes in eight different cities next fall.

The Plainsmen, coached by Jack Meagher of Notre Dame, play a schedule that takes them from New Orleans to Boston, with engagements at Montgomery and Birmingham, Ala.; Atlanta and Columbus, Ga.; New Orleans and Baton Rouge, La.; New York, and Boston.

After tacking Manhattan College at New York, the Plainsmen return to Atlanta to meet Georgia Tech, before going North again to play Boston College.
