Autos to 'Talk' Tonight as Inventor Shows Powers of 'Sons-Vox'

Proof that speech is not confined to human beings will be offered by Gilbert Wright, Los Angeles inventor, when he demonstrates his "Sons-vox" during a broadcast at 8:30 tonight on NBC-WIBA. The device converts sound waves into vibrations which, in turn, are converted into words. Wright, son of novelist Harold Bell Wright, will present a scene in which automobiles, flames, bells, animals, and sirens will hold animated conversations.

Joe Louis Can't Take a Punch

—But He Is Game to The Core

By DAN PARKER

If confronted with the obvious expert will finally recognize it. So, today, with the pardonable pride of discovery, may I reveal to the customers that which they've known for the past several years—the fact that Joe Louis can't take a punch? Let there be any misunderstanding at the outset, let me hasten to reaffirm my belief that the world's champion is game to the core. I'm merely listing a physiological shortcoming, not impugning his valor. It is a curious anomaly that one of the deadliest punchers of all time isn't equipped to take it. But that's the naked truth about Joe, driven home to me at last by his brawl with Tony Galento at the Yankee Stadium.

Without meaning to detract from Tony, I don't think he will be listed among the great punchers of the prize ring. Too many bums have stood up under his attack when it was much more formidable than it was one night last week to have me accept him as a dispenser of extraordinary punishment. Yet punches that gave Arthur Godfrey no more concern than in Chilean mosquito had the world's champion giddy on several occasions and on the floor once in this glorious throwback to Stone Age brawling. Adding these facts to the evidence accumulated from other bouts, there is no other conclusion for a dull-witted boxing expert to arrive at but the one that has been written in foot-high letters on the wall, for all these years: "Joe can't shake off a hard punch."

Along about the third round, Joe was on what is known in Harlem as the dark foundation. But he didn't make us experts look too bad in the fourth. Not since Bleeding Belgium has a gory warrior emerged from defeat with more honors than stout-hearted Tony Galento. Now I can understand why his good neighbors in Orange—intelligent people like my friend Doc Higgins—had such blind faith in their battling barkeep. And so, I feel honored in joining them today in a salute to one of the bravest of the brave.

Henceforth in this writer's lexicon Galento will stand for "galant."

ARNDT JORGENS

Platteville — Arndt Jorgens, catcher of the New York Yankee baseball team, is a new part owner of the Bayley block, Platteville business building.

The building is owned by Jorgens, and L. F. and H. V. Schultz, Chicago, who plan to make several changes in the building and to complete a remodeling program.

The former owners, Kettler and Wienbergen, bought the building in 1911 from Thomas and David Jones. It received its name from Mrs. David Jones, whose maiden name had been Bayley. The block now contains the Cummins shoe store, Snowden department store, Beaven's jewelry store, club pool rooms, the Platteville Junior office, and about 12 business offices on the upper floor.
