WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Post-Intelligencer, a Hearst newspaper, published by President Roosevelt's son-in-law, John Boettiger, had violated the Wagner Labor Relations act, a key

New Deal statute. The paper was ordered to reinstate Mrs. Ruth Glvan and Helen Hoover with back pay to their jobs in the classified advertising department of the newspaper, which is owned by Hearst Publications, Inc. The board held they were discharged for membership and activity in the American Newspaper Guild, Congress of Industrial Organizations affiliate

Charges that Ray Griffith had been discharged for union activity were dismissed by the NLRB, which held that he had not been discriminated against.

Baraboo, Too, Makes Its Mark in Music World

MILWAUKEE-(U.P.)-Lancelot Patrick Ross-Lannie Ross to you—came to town Tuesday to rehearse for his concert which officials said would attract 50,000 to Washington park tonight. The singer said he hoped to do a little sightseeing. "You know," he said, "my wife is a Wisconsin girl. She was Olive A. White, born at Baraboo. Studied singing, too, before entering radio publicity work. I want her to study voice again, but she thinks one singer is enough in a family."

William Norton, Salesman, Dies in Hospital

William Norton, 65, of 430 W. Washington ave., died Tuesday afternoon at a Madison hospital. A former real estate salesman, he was born and raised in Brook-lyn, coming to Madison 26 years
