

Samuel Tilden Field, right, pleads with his daughter, Joan, not to make the wrong marital choice during an episode of "When a Girl Marries," dramatic serial. Field's marriage floundered and ne doesn't want his daughter to be unhappy because of her mother's ambitions. Announcer Gallop stands by for the sign-off. Joan is played by Noel Mills, while Ed Jerome takes the part of HOLLYWOOD - (U.P.) -Clocks and calendars, between them, furnish your motion picture property man with more worries than all the rest of the problems he must face during production of a picture.

It wasn't so bad a few years ago, before the theater-going public became "movie boner" conscious, but now a great many of the millions who attend the movies spend their time looking for a trivial error to write letters to the

And most of the errors occur where clocks and calendars appear in scenes, the prop men say.

It wouldn't be so bad if the studios shot their films in continuity, but they don't and won't. Thus it is up to the prop man to make sure that when Pat O'Brien leaves the warden's office in "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" at 11:31 a. m. Oct. 29 to escort John Garfield to the admitting office he doesn't reach the lat-ter place at 4:30 p. m. Nov. If he does, he is sure to receive a deluge of letters couched in terms something like this:

"My goodness, what a big prison Sing Sing must be. It took O'Brien and Garfield exactly 14 days and five hours to walk from the warden's office to the admitting office."

A checkup will reveal that the two scenes were shot three weeks apart, but that does not relieve the prop man of his guilt. He is supposed to keep track of such things.

Because he is held responsible, the prop man usually keeps charts on time and dates which occur in a pic-

Even with these precautions, the prop man sometimes slips up in a picture in which eight or 10 or more dates and hours are "working," as they say in studio parlance. Per-haps that's why most prop men go around with a tired, sad look. They know that every minute of the day someone in some part of the world is trying to find a "boner" in their work.

Defies Hitler

Beauteous Vera Hruba, Czechoslovak ice skating star, now per-forming in New York, defies Herrs Hitler, Goering and all Nazis in general and the German consul in New York in particular to make her stop dancing on ice to the tune of the Czechoslovak national anthem. When the German consulate ordered her to do just that, the un-anachlussed foe queen retorted: "Mr. German consul-not for one little minute can you tell me what to do. You my boss?

Wyoming's Largest Tree Wins by Hair

DELTA, Colo, -(U.P)- Arguments carried on last summer over the world's largest tree have assumed sectional aspects with the vindication of Wyoming—by .22 of an inch—in its claim to the biggest standing single timber in the Rocky mountain region. Wyoming foresters made their boast on the strength of measurements of a pine in the Medicine Bow national forest 22 miles southwest of Saratoga. Three Olathe, Colo., citizens, indignant, asserted their state pride with a claim that a cottonwood near Do-minguez in the Gunnison river canyon, was larger.

J. B. Seals, supervisor of the Uncompander national forest at Delta, trekked 22 miles northwest of his post, armed with measuring instruments. He came back with the information that the Colorado cottonwood was 19.68 feet in circumference at a spot 4½ feet from the ground.

Good pay for good work is a maxim on the Illinois Central System.

Railroad men provide a service that keeps the wheels of commerce turningwithout it civilization would be crippled. For such service they deserve a reasonable wage. This applies alike to the section man spiking down a rail and to the engineer who pilots over that same rail a train with lives and property.

Out of the money earned by this service the railroad must pay all its bills, including wages. The latter item consumed 43 cents of every dollar the Illinois Central System took in last year.

It is on the efforts of workers that the railroad depends for earnings. They must provide a service that will win popularity and deserve equality under the laws governing competition. Their success in these respects will establish the prosperity of the railroad and of its employes.
