Director And Actor Subdue Unruly Horse

Merritt Sibbald Struck By Leg; Berkley Has Novel Idea On Crews

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 19.—(INS)—Quick action on the part of Frank Morgan and Director Edwin L. Marin in seizing the reins of a rearing horse saved still photographer Merritt Sibbald from being trampled on the set of "Henry Goes Arizona."

The photographer, who was focusing his camera on action in a western street scene, was thrown down by a glancing blow from a horse's leg, and part of his equipment smashed. Morgan rushed from the set and with Marin's help pulled the horse to one side saving the photographer from more serious injury.

Busby Berkeley introduced a brand new one to Hollywood when he required that every man on the crew that operated the camera boom during the photographing of "God's Country" number in "Babes In Arms" had to have at least a fundamental musical education. The action of the number, starring Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland, was so tricky that the boom had to be moved on certain musical notes and phrases from one angle to another as the song progressed. The result was that every man in the crew of 15 who operated the big iron arm device had studied either singing, piano, violin or some other musical instrument and could read music.

Uncas, the "Last of the Mohicans" character in James Fenimore Cooper's celebrated novel, was at one time an Indian officer in Rogers' Rangers, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer research department discovered while making George Macdonald, technical adviser on the picture, that Uncas helped raise an Indian battalion which served with the rangers. The Stockbridge Indians who are shown as allies of the rangers, in the novel, were in reality Mohicans, that obtained their name because they hailed from the district near Stockbridge, Mass.

Hedy Lamarr, for a thirst-quencher these hot days, sips cool milk and honey, with a raw egg beaten into it. They couldn't find Harpo Marx when he was needed in a scene. So Police Chief Whitey Hendry's slouch at M-G-M. They found him out on his trail. They found him out on his trail. Director Eddie Buzzell had forgotten he had told Harpo to train as an ostrich jockey for a forthcoming scene. William Powell's son, William, Jr., graduated from private military school, enters Hollywood high school in September—which means that Powell will give up his Beverly Hills residence and move into the Hollywood athletic club.

Brilliant Young Conductor To Head Program On Sunday

Edwin McArthur Will Share Podium With Prof. Jose Castaneda; Old "Hit Broadcasts" To Be Revived

Edwin McArthur, distinguished concert accompanist who in a single year has made a notable record as an orchestral conductor, will give his first radio appearances in such a role on Sunday, when he will share the podium over WJZ from 7 to 8 p. m., with Prof. Jose Castaneda, brilliant young Latin-American musician.

McArthur first became known in the musical world as an accompanist for such distinguished concert artists as Kirsten Flagstad, John Charles Thomas, Elisabeth Rethberg, Ezio Pinza, Richard Crooks, Anna Case, and many others.

He made his debut as a conductor in the summer of 1938, with the Sydney, Australia, Symphony orchestra. Subsequent appearances both in his country and abroad have earned him recognition as a top-flight conductor in the amazingly short time of 12 months.

McArthur was born in Denver, Colo., in 1907. Beginning his musical studies in his home city, he was later awarded a scholarship by the Juilliard School of Music in New York. Subsequently he studied conducting in Vienna. He is also well-known as a composer. His song, "Spring Game," has been featured by Kirsten Flagstad in her recitals.

McArthur has chosen Deems Taylor's "Gigue," Op. 29, No. 27, he will conduct "An Opera Ballet," by Vittorio Giannini. Professor Castaneda will present music by Latin-American composers on both broadcasts.

Styled to present-day tastes, a "hit" program of a decade ago when networks were young and small will return for an extended series over one of the largest hook-ups ever arranged for a weekly broadcast.

Eighty stations of the WEAF chain will be linked each week from 4 to 4:15 p. m., for the renewed series, which will star Jimmy Shields, rising young tenor, the Norsemen Quartet, D'Artega's orchestra, and Rosamond Ames, stylé expert.

Offering a sparkling array of the most popular melodies of the day, the program will follow the successful pattern introduced 10 years ago but streamlined to modern preferences. Its sponsors were the first shoe manufacturers to use radio for advertising.

Jimmy Shields is Canadian born and 26 years old. Three years ago he was sent to the United States on an artist exchange basis. He found a place on a Buffalo station but his engaging voice soon became a national attraction.

The harmonies of the Norsemen Quartet, consisting of Hal Gordon, top tenor and newcomer, Adrian "Ade" Revere, second tenor, Edwin Lindstrom, baritone and Kenneth Schon, bass.

News developments on four scattered fronts—international and national affairs, sports and events of interest to women—will be reported by experts in each field in a unique new series to be launched over WJZ.

Specialists to report highlight developments of the week and last minute news in their respective fields each Sunday from 4:15 to 4:30 p. m. will be Baukhage, veteran reporter of world affairs; Nola Luxford, The Programs will be titled "Four Stars News."

Many a time a housewife will slam the door in the face of a house-to-house canvasser. Their representatives match wits in the Paul Wing Spelling Bee, over WEAF at 4:30 p. m. One team will consist of Fuller brush men from Newburgh, New York. The canvassers will include Thomas Day, Manuel German, Walter Organ, K. Lord, and I. Crown. The Newburgh housewives will be Mrs. A. J. O'Donovan, Mrs. William Kennedy, Mrs. John J. Reed, Mrs. Warren Kimball and Mrs. George McKenally.

The lovely lady next in line to visit that idol made of wood, Charlie McCarthy, is Joan Bennett. She and Charles Irwin of the movies will be guests on the program over WEAF at 7 p. m. The busy young screen actress also will appear in a one-act play with Don Ameche, Nelson Liddy, back on the program after his concert tour and vacation, and Dorothy Lamour, singing with Robert Armstrong's orchestra, will complete the cast of the evening.

Henry Aldrich's tandem job, brackless and oilless for years but intended for serious work in the approaching local bicycle race, will cause plenty of conversation when the WEAF network listens in on The Aldrich Family's goings-on at 6 p. m. Henry's father in an unguarded moment agreed to team up with Henry (Ezra Stone) for the race. Now he's trying to squirm out of it.

Book Reviews

Books Reviewed Here May Be Obtained At The Lima Public Library, Main Library

By MARY LATHROP ECKFORD

Fighting Years. By Oswald Garrison Villard. Harcourt, Brace and Co., $3.75.

Oswald Garrison Villard's career has been significant; he is the grandson of William Lloyd Garrison and the son of Henry Villard, the builder of the Northern Pacific railroad, and has been a distinguished editor and pacifist throughout his life.

He, too, is of peasant stock, and tho he was bred a cobbler, his hand knows the plow. Like Burns he will stop in the furrow to give "his soul to spring." He writes here his autobiography giving an engaging picture of the Irish countryside and life in a small village near Dublin.

He writes of his experiences as apprentice to the shoemaker's last, as ploughman and farm laborer and of loafing, working, gossiping, dancing and gambling.

MY WIFE AND I: the story of Louise and Sidney Homer. By Sidney Homer. MacMillan Co., $3.50.

Sidney Homer's telling of the story of his life and Madame Homer's is quite delightful. Few biographies or autobiographies are so spontaneous and unaffected and few musical memoirs are so generous in spirit.

DATELINE: EUROPE. By Leo Calvin Rosten. Harcourt, Brace and Co., $2.00.

An in-sequential, but diverting story is this. As one of the characters says, "It's like a cross between Graustark and the Arabian Nights, written by E. Phillips Oppenheim." It is concerned with Peter Strake and his girl assistant, both newspaper correspondents who chase across Europe for the story behind the assassination of a Balkan king.

THE GREEN POOL. By Patrick Kavanagh. Harper and Brothers, $3.00.

Patrick Kavanagh has been national affairs, sports and events of interest to women—will be reported by experts in each field in a unique new series to be launched over WJZ.

Specialists to report highlight developments of the week and last minute news in their respective fields each Sunday from 4:15 to 4:30 p. m. will be Baukhage, veteran reporter of world affairs; Nola Luxford, The Programs will be titled "Four Stars News."

Henry Busse Band Booked At The Point

The public sets the styles in dance music and just what the next cycle will be depends upon their reaction to any portion developed and fostered by our modern dance band conductors," said Henry Busse, creator of the famed "Busse Shuffle Rhythm," who brings his orchestra to Sandy Beach park, Russells Point, one night only Thursday, Aug. 24.

"Some conductor will accidentally stumble on to some musical trick which the public will like," stated the rotund, dark-haired Busse, and then every band in the country will be copying that style.

"Right now, the craze is wing," Busse said, "altho swing is nothing more than modernized jazz. As far as the younger generation is concerned swing is what they want, so it appears that will be here for some time — you have to give the public what it wants."

Featured with Henry Busse and his orchestra are lovely V. Mele, sweet, swing singer; Ducky Young, comic vocalist; Dick Wharton, romantic baritone and the "Three Strikers" vocal trio specializing in shuffle tunes.
