Altho Marion Lois Hopkins was only 12 days old, she carned $75 a day as a motion picture actress when she appeared in "The Man in the Iron Mask," now at the Sigma.

The story begins with the birth of twin sons to King Louis XII! of France and his queen. Anne o Austria, and little Marion Lois played both roles, even the she is a girl. She weighed only a little more than five pounds at birth and her tiny size qualified her to play the roles of the newborn twins.

When Assistant Casting Director Jack Murton started to fill out the baby's social security blank, as is provided by law, he designated that the child will be 65 years of age on March 15, 2004. Marion Lois got special attention, since California law provides that she could work only two hours a day and that she could not be under the lights for more than 30 seconds at a time. Joan Bennett and Louis Hayward are co-starred in "The Man in the Iron Mask," while the supporting cast includes Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alen Hale, Walter Kingsford, Miles Mander, Bert Roach, Montagu Love, Marian Martin and Doris
