

Cinema Idols Have Hard Task Forgetting Cares

Mountain And Sea Retreats Are Popular

Burns And Allen Steal Away To Sierra's; Gable Likes South America

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 2.—(INS)—Where do the cinema idols go when they want to get away from it all? The fellow answering that question can write his own ticket, with any major studio casting director—and he'll probably rate a statue in the Hollywood Hall of Fame along with it.

A few years back one of our more ingenious actors made the startling discovery that he could get some slight measure of privacy from his studio bosses if he "serammed" to some inaccessible place after completing a picture chore.

The scheme worked and before one could say "Hey!" the studio major-domos were taking time off for nervous breakdowns. Today, you can name anything from a cave in the mountains to an island in the South Seas—and you'll probably hit on the vacation hide-away of some well known actor, actress, director or writer—even a producer or two.

George Burns and Gracie Allen, for example have a little mountain cabin tucked cozily away in the high Sierras of northern California. "The place is so inaccessible," says Gracie, "that we've got to lose ourselves the first time we went up there looking for the shack."

Clark Gable generally goes to Montana or South America when he becomes fed up with Hollywood. Madge Evans gives the summer stock companies in New England a whirl as a cure for the movie ennui.

Jack Haley has a Connecticut farm out Westport way, where he hibernates when the wear and tear of trying to be funny 24 hours a day becomes a bit too trying. "The place is so far removed from civilization" chuckled Jack, "that it takes me 45 minutes to get fast to the nearest grocery store and my next door neighbor is two and a half miles up the road."

A little place peaking timidly from behind an abandoned rock quarry on the tip of Cape Cod is Jimmy Cagney's refuge. Jimmy dares anyone to find the place without a detailed map for guidance. Frances Langford and John Hall own a little island off the Florida Gulf Coast. The only way one can get to it is by boat—and it's a two hour sail at that. "But it's worth it," Frances declared. "We can hunt, fish and even play miniature golf, if we wish. Our plantation house, on the island, is equipped with everything except a telephone—and we don't want that."

The Dick Powells (Joan Blondell) own a boat, the "Frolic." "When we want to really get away," said Dick, "Joan and I—and the children, just pile into the boat and get going. We decide where we're going when we get out a ways. The only way we can be picked up is by the Coast Guard."

And there you have it. The hide-aways—some of them—of our cinema stellar lights. But they're all amateurs, according to Peter, the Hermit. Hollywood's original five alone could make it. "They even a little shack up in the hills, comes to town every so often—and gets all the privacy he needs by just keeping his mouth shut!"

Book Reviews

Books Reviewed Here May Be Obtained At The Lima Public Library, Main Library

By MARY LATHROP
Lima Public Library Staff
AMERICA IN MIDPASSAGE. By Charles and Mary Beard Macmillan Company. $3.50.

The Beards have always been interested in social and intellectual history. Here they present the sources of entertainment, literature, the arts and sciences, social and philosophical thought of the past decade. Nowhere in our literature can be found a more intelligent analysis of the role of the motion picture, the radio, the popular magazines in our social set-up.

The book covers the years from the time of the Coolidge regime in the middle 1920's to the present; it is intended as the third volume of "The Rise of American Civilization."

EUROPE IN RETREAT. By Vera Micheles Dean. Alfred A. Knopf. $2.00.

This little guide book to the late difficulties in Europe should not be overlooked. Mrs. Dean has a really remarkable ability to pack a maximum of complicated historical detail into a minimum of simple wording. Her object in this book is to point out some of the principal factors which paved the way for the Munich settlement and to indicate the part they may play in the future. She has extraordinary resources in the way of information. She writes clearly and competently giving enough background for the reader to orient himself comfortably.

WINE OF GOOD HOPE. By Arthur D. Divine. The Macmillan Company. $2.50.

A novel written with genuine distinction. The author obviously has a love of words and exactness, but fortunately an even greater love of the soil, the sea, and the sound qualities in the heart of man. It is the story of Tony Lemaire's conflict between his love for his South African home and the family tradition that all the men of the line are wanderers. It is a book to be read and enjoyed as a romantic novel in the best tradition.

AUGLAIZE FAIR ENDS SESSION

10,000 Attend Final Event Of Program Hailed As Success

(Lima News Bureau)

WAPAKONETA, Sept. 2.—The 76th annual Auglaize-co fair was brought to a close here tonight with more than 10,000 persons on the grounds and was unanimously called a success with one of the largest livestock and art displays in years being featured.

Friday afternoon's session featured the fair's final day of racing. The card was attended by John Bennett, 94, of Waynesfield, one of the county's oldest residents, who has never missed an exposition here since the first fair was staged 76 years ago. He was introduced to the racetrack and received a great ovation.

The evening's program starred Mickey Katz and his 40 Krazy Kittens with 18 high classed vocal acts. More than 4,000 persons witnessed the night's entertainment and claimed it by far the best of the week. Secretary Harry Kahn intimated that attempts would be made to secure a return engagement of the show in 1940.

Tonight's performance featured "Mirth and Melody," a musical comedy with a cast of 40 performers and an all girl band. The afternoon's show, Barker's circus, attracted more than 5,000 persons and was well received by the audience.

The first annual "sportsmen" dog show, sponsored by the Auglaize Fish and Game Protective Assn., drew a large group of dog fanciers Friday evening when ribbons and prizes were awarded. The show was only open to hunting dogs.

The 76th annual fair marked the first time that Saturday sessions were attempted and proved popular with fairgoers in this section of the state. Expositions staged in recent years featured Sunday sessions. These were abandoned when the fair board received a petition from ministers (throughout the county asking cancellation of Sunday program at the fair.
