Ilm Sound Effects Men Have Really Tough Job

Substitute Search Goes On All The Time: Many Mishaps Prove Help

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 30 --There's probably nothing as inmakers of movies employ to produce illusions and sound effects screen. And there's always some new method popping up.

For years uncooked corn flakes have been used as snow. Just redinner. Consequently when snow scenes were made or "Untamed," crackle like corn lakes and they reflect light better.

USE PISTOL SHOT FOR THUNDER

dom has thunder). Most popular McCarthy. substitutes for thunder are buckshot rattled around in an inflated football bladder and a pistol shot. Oddly enough, the pistol shot foot from the microphone then while playing it back the sound track is slowed and the shot sounds like a long low rumble. It distorts the sound like a phonograph running down.

but for two days the frog sat in Oct. 8. a tank in the sound department and failed to croak a single croak. The sound man remembered a frog that kept him awake nights, so he took a portable recording set home and tried to get the sound. After three hours of patient waiting, all he got was a single weak little croak. In desperation he played the weak croak back to the frog at the studio and the bullfrog immediately answered. Inside an hour he had more frog sounds than the picture could use.

Best way to get the sound of a motorcycle is by running an electric razor, and that is the main reason you never see an electric razor in pictures. The sound of a fire burning is made by crumpling a piece of cellophane. Actors can't walk on gravel because the noise drowns out dialogue. Consequently all gravel in the movies s ground cork.

In "Some Like It Hot," Frank Sully had the role of a musician and was called on to bite the mouthpiece off a clarinet. The sound man got the right effect by munching on a stalk of celery.

An extra in "Ruler of the Seas" unwittingly discovered a sound for the creaking of a sailinb vessel. The extra was wearing a prop leg which he had trouble standing up on, so he stuck the peg in a knot hole in the deck to help him keep his balance. The resultant creeking was just what the sound department wanted.

Priscilla Lane In State Film

Bringing together again the cast and director which made "Four Daughters" such a memorable event on last season's screen program, Warner Bros.' "Daughters gram, Warner Bros.'
